Problems of SERA

NFORMATION is still rather vague as to the plans for SERA, the new public relief and work program. It is rather surprising that the government, after its experience with setting up emergency programs, did not have SERA organized and ready to take the helm the moment CWA came to an end Saturday. It now appears the new program will have to be evolved through a period of uncertainty, conflicting instructions and false starts such as marked the opening of CWA.

It is difficult to forcess how much the community

It is difficult to forecast how much the community will benefit from SERA work, except insofar as it gives employment to the needy. Under CWA, certain definite physical improvements were accomplished, some of them long seriously needed. Our understanding is that the important CWA projects as yet unfinished will be taken over and completed under SERA.

But what the new work projects may be is another.

But what the new work projects may be is another question. The government has indicated it will put out money for labor only, and the benefiting political units will have to dig up 100 per cent of the cost of materials and other incidentals. Under CWA, the government was willing to contribute 20 per cent to the extra-labor

Most of the local political units, such as the city and school districts, inaugurated CWA projects that required a considerable local contribution. As a result, their treasuries have been depleted of emergency funds, and where they will get money to help finance SERA pro-jects is an unanswered question at this time.

It is quite obvious that SERA, while it seems to be socially sound as a relief method, raises important new problems for the local communities.

Youth and Public Affairs

HOPEFUL sign of the times is the active interest A HOPEFUL sign of the times is the active interest young people are taking in politics and public affairs generally. Locally this is manifest in such organizations as the Young Democrats club, the junior chamber of commerce, and the Twenty-Thirty club. At this writing it looks as if both republican and democratic county central committees will have many youthful members as a result of a movement among young members. bers as a result of a movement among young members of both parties to take an active interest in politics.

Not only are young people frequently more energetic than oldsters, but often they are more realistic. In ac-cordance with the time-worn adage about a new broom sweeping clean, their young minds sweep aside superreally are. In politics, it is to be hoped, this has the effect of rejecting bunk for what it really is, because bunk is becoming all too common in that field.

No one, of course, questions the value of experience. From ancient times, old men have been accepted as advisors and great weight attached to their judgment and utterances. This is as it should be, but it is just as well not to permit things to get top-heavy with oldsters. The fresh viewpoint of youth and the energy of youth will be found important and desirable influences in the affairs of the community and the state.

It is difficult at this time to forecast the relative strength of State Senator Upton and Representative Pierce in their bid for votes in south central Oregon. So far the two local newspapers have remained neutral. Representative Pierce has been a frequent visitor to Lakeview during the past several years while Senator Upton is a stranger in this community.

Governor Myers assured Secretary Dunbar that Federal Farm Mortgage corporation bonds will be an attractive investment, "They will be as readily marketable as bonds of the United States government and they will be quoted in all of the principal markets," he continued. "Holders who have to dispose of these bonds should not sell them without first ascertaining their real market value."

The governor particularly stressed the fact that country bankers probably will be large investors in these securities since the creditors of farmers who are being refinanced may not all be in the position where they can hold the bonds so acquired and will find it necessary to sell them. Secretary Dunbar states that these bonds, which will be tendered to farmers' creditors in payment of the refinanced indetedness, are "exempt from all federal, state, municipal and local taxution, except surfaxes and estate, inheritance and gift taxes. They are lawful security for 15-day borrowings by member banks of the federal reserve system. They are also lawful investment for all trust, public and fiduciary funds of which the government. The payments of the finterest on these bonds and the repayment of their principal are guaranteed by the United States, which means that if the government.
