Two Officials Dragged From Court House

POTTSVILLE, Pa., April 13. (AP)—Enraged by increases in county taxes, a mob of more than 1000 property owners from West Mahoney township Thursday stormed the Schuylkill courthouse and forcibly dragged two county commissioners from their office. Order was restored by state troopers, aided by Pottsville and Tamaqua police after there had been threats by lynching.

Officials Hooted—A committee first was sent to the courthouse asking that the commissioners appear before the crowd and explain the reason for the tax increases. Before any action could be taken, the mob got out of control and surged into the building.

The commissioners refused to leave their office and the crowd began whooping and hooting. They gathered in a second floor courtroom.

"Make 'em Come!" several men shouted. "Drag 'em up here!"

The mob moved toward the commissioners' office. Refused admission, they smashed down three doors.

Seizing Commissioners Roy Brown and William Adams, they forced them to go with them to the upper courtroom.

The two officials attempted to explain the necessity for increases in the general township assessments. They were hooted down.

Previously Minority Commissioner James H. Kirchner spoke to the crowd from the courthouse steps and gave assurance that he had not voted for the increases. He was cheered.

REPORTS OF GOLD HEARD AT SYDNEY

SYDNEY, Australia, April 13. (AP)—Tales of the discovery of buried Peruvian treasures valued at $50,000,000 sprang up today coincident with the return of an Anglo-French schooner expedition to the Tuamotu archipelago in the South Pacific.

The leader of the expedition denied gold had been found, but said the party had located the submerged island sought.

On this island, according to a pirate's map now in safekeeping in a Tahiti bank, is a gold trove buried many years ago.

The leaders of the expedition are planning to return to the site in June, 1935.

It's Fish the President Is Off to Investigate

There were no politicians—not even a secretary—on board when President Roosevelt left on Vincent Astor's yacht Nourmahal for an eight-day "investigation into the habits of the Florida barracuda and the Cuban bone fish." He is shown on deck with Vincent Astor (left) and his son James (right) just before the trim yacht left Jacksonville, Fla., for points south.

Puzzle: Where's the Junction?

Clinton Junction, Okla., is only a speck on the map at its best, but even that speck was hard to find after six feet of water rushed over the town when the Washita river went on a rampage as shown here. The rail station kept its equilibrium, but other buildings toppled before the torrents. The flood took more than a dozen lives down stream.

Court House Roof Makes Lunch Room

A roof-garden picnic, minus the garden, but with all other prerequisites for a successful picnic was enjoyed on the roof of the Klamath county courthouse Thursday noon when five girl clerks from the tax collector's office took their lunch to the top of the building and enjoyed the warm spring sunshine.

The noon hour was spent on the roof, and what with the abundance of good eats and the hot sunshine absorbed during that time, the clerks were badly in need of a siesta before beginning their afternoon duties.

Suspect Denies Connection In Lindbergh Plot

LE HAVRE, France, April 13. (AP)—Stewart Donnelly, wanted in the United States on charges of swindling, denied here today that he ever had had any of the banknotes paid by "Jafsis" in the Lindbergh kidnaping case.

Donnelly is being held here for American detectives on their way to take him back to New York. He is registered in the local jail as "Frank Eaton."

The French police likewise denied rumors from America that Donnelly had some of the banknotes in question in his possession when arrested last August. The notes he was rumored to have had were part of a bundle of $50,000 paid kidnapers in the Lindbergh case through Dr. John F. Condon, the "Jafsis" of that unsolved crime.

Donnelly's extradition also had been requested by Canada.
