

BAY BRIDGES PROMISE BIG LABOR BOOST

Construction work on the two great bridges at San Francisco will give employment during 1934 to an average of 4,400 men directly at work on the projects and to 8,000 in various national industries supplying the materials, according to a weekly summary of Far Western business, by the Bank of America, Pacific coast branch banking institution. Expenditures under the 1934 schedules for the two projects will total $28,500,000.

By the end of 1934 it is expected that the bridges, to cost ultimately approximately $110,000,000, will be from 30 to 40 per cent completed, the Bank states.

On the San Francisco-Oakland structure, a California state project to connect San Francisco with the mainland to the east, the submarine work is practically finished after more than a year's time. Steel work, which ultimately will rise to a height of a 40-story building, is now being erected on one of the four piers which will support the main spans across the bay. When completed the bridge will be the world's largest and longest, measuring eight and one-quarter miles in length over-all.

The Golden Gate bridge, which will span that famous entrance into San Francisco harbor, also was begun a little more than a year ago, and already the steel has risen on one of the piers to an elevation of 675 feet, or more than 90 per cent of the ultimate height. This is the first of the gigantic towers which will support the world's largest individual span, measuring four-fifths of a mile in length.

A project of the San Francisco Golden Gate bridge district, this bridge will connect San Francisco with the mainland to the north.

TOURIST TRAVEL REVIVAL VIEWED

All signs point to a great revival of tourist travel to the northwest this year, representatives of the Southern Pacific company declared today, with the announcement of the railroad's summer schedule of reduced transportation costs.

Providing for trips to all parts of the country, the low-fare roundtrip tickets will be available from May 15 to October 14, with return limit of October 31. It was stated, Coach and intermediate fares will be materially lower than in 1933.

Pullman rates already have been cut one-third in western and southeastern territory. It was pointed out, and with the appearance of summer excursion fares, travel costs will be the lowest in many years.

A feature of Southern Pacific's summer service will be the addition of new air-conditioned equipment to its leading trains to insure perfect comfort under all weather conditions.

All the present peanut politicians who run our governments could be replaced by one-third as many technicians and the system would be run far better. —John Yoss, Wisconsin "technocrat."

Figures in Principal Whipping

Here are three persons figuring in the "horsewhipping" of a school principal at Patterson, Cal., because he, in pursuit of scholastic duties, used a strap. William Robertson (center), Mrs. George Robertson, right, called at the office of Principal C. S. Torvend (inset), wrenched the whipping strap from his hands and applied it vigorously to his shoulders. Brought to court, Mrs. Robertson was given a six month suspended sentence.

There is nothing like the wilds of Hawaii to make a person appreciate a home, so Mrs. Boland has just bought herself one of the latter after a couple of months of work in the former for Cecil B. De Mille's latest Paramount production, "Four Frightened People."
