

CONVERSATION PLAN OUTLINED AT WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, May 1. (AP)—Outlines of conservation programs which will be made effective in the various lumber producing districts of the United States were in the hands of the lumber code authority today and are expected to be in operation by June 1.

The programs include the setting up of machinery to enforce practices written into the code by the federal conservation congress last winter for fire protection and reduction of hazards, cooperation between private and public forestry interests in fire, insect and disease control, conservation of immature and young growth, restocking cut-over lands, selective logging and sustained yield.

Each district, under the plans being considered, will administer the conservation programs.

The code will insure a perpetual supply of lumber products, Axel Oxholm, chief of forest products division of the department of commerce, declared in discussing the conservation program. The plan, he added, will assure an adequate supply of this natural resource, since annual growth and cut will be balanced.

While the rules of cutting and protecting young growth to insure a perpetual supply of lumber is expected to increase the cost of logging somewhat, lumbermen, closely associated with the industry, predict that the benefits will more than overbalance any increased expenses.

Removal of snags and the protection of young growth will slow up operations somewhat, they said, but will facilitate the fighting of fires on cut-over lands and keep crops coming on. The removal of snags alone, they said, will increase the cost of logging from $3 to $10 an acre, but will reduce the fire hazard so as to be well worth the expense.

Windows Shattered in Silver Shirt Bookshop

Animosity against Silver Shirts flared into violence in Los Angeles, strongest citadel of the American "Fascist" organization when, on two successive nights, bricks were hurled through windows of this bookshop, where Silver Shirt and anti-Communist literature is sold. The proprietor promptly painted edges of the shattered glass and added legends, underscoring his belief that Communists were responsible.

Guild President Announces Cast for "Distant Drums"

Announcement of the cast for "Distant Drums," a drama of the Old Oregon Trail, has been made by Miss Virginia West, president of the Little Theatre guild, which will produce the play at the Pelican theatre next Thursday night.

Katherine Walton, musician of Klamath Falls, will play the leading feminine role of "Eunice Wolfhill."

George Schlusser, K. U. H. S. teacher, whose portrayal of the philanthropist in "Ten Nights in a Bar-Room" brought him to the attention of Klamath theatregoers, will take the part of Jason Allenby, whose love for Eunice Wolfhill causes him to turn traitor to the wagon train crossing the Old Oregon Trail in 1843.

Joseph Mercer, Henley school teacher, plays "Captain Wolfhill," leader of the wagon train.

The part of Reverend Williams is taken by Don F. Hamlin, attorney of this city.

Alex Volchok plays "Quincy," the gigantic old trapper who is guiding the wagon train.

Others in the cast are as follows:

Jay Pike, a farmer—Asabel Bush.

Besides being used for mid-night rehearsals several times a week for members of the cast, the stage at the Pelican theatre is occupied almost every night during the dinner hour and around midnight by Art Bremer, property manager of the guild, and Jack Barbour, his assistant.

One night Bremer and Barbour, helped by Harry Poole's stage crew, worked from 11 p. m. until 3:00 o'clock in the morning, getting all the covered wagons on the stage. The wagons were too wide for the stage door and had to be partially dismantled before being pushed and pulled up the incline from Klamath avenue to the stage.

CHURCH DEMANDS TUGWELL RESIGN

PORTLAND, Ore., May 1. (AP)—The resignation of Dr. Rexford G. Tugwell, assistant secretary of agriculture, will be demanded by the Rose City Methodist Episcopal church here because Dr. Tugwell said "one of the oldest and quietest roads to contentment lies through the conventional trinity of wine, women and song."

When questioned at Washington, D. C., about the statement, Dr. Tugwell simply referred reporters to a speech he made in Washington last January before the National Democratic Women's club.

Mention of "wine, women and song," with reference to "contentment," was made in this Washington speech, the text of which was chiefly a plea for temperance.

The Rev. Fred C. Taylor, pastor of the Portland church, read the sentence to his congregation Sunday, picking it up from a Methodist church publication which had quoted it.

white horse, and Mr. Streeter, the black.
