OREGON: Cloudy—Unsettled Continued Cool

Editorials On the Day's News

By FRANK JENKINS

EARLY settlement of the shipping strike seems improbable. New violence, the headlines tell us, is feared.

What a pity, with millions still out of work, and buying power still exceedingly low.

Something is always happening to take the joy out of life.

HEAT spell sends grain prices higher. July wheat touches $1.06 and December wheat goes to $1.07 after a day of frenzied trading in Chicago.

Please note that it is NATURE, not legislation, that does it. For years we've been passing laws trying to raise the price of wheat, and in the face of all these efforts the price has gone steadily down.

But when nature takes a hand, it's different. The traders know that when nature starts she means business.

DROUGHT in the Middle West raises grain prices. That won't help the Middle West, which apparently will have little grain to sell. It is this prospect that sends prices up.

Out here on the Pacific Coast, where prospects for a wheat crop are fair, it WILL HELP.

One man's meat is another man's poison.

DROUGHT and heat send grain prices kiting upward. Rising prices sound good, after years of steady decline.

But mark this: No nation ever became prosperous as a result of drought and crop failure.

HERE'S an odd item in the news:

Harry Cobb, of Prescott, Arizona, sues Maude R. Gillfillan, of San Jose, California, for $100,000 for breach of her promise to marry him.

It's a man's right to sue for breach of promise just as much as a woman's, and if any suffering is really involved in such cases—which this writer doubts—a man can suffer as much as a woman.

BUT—speaking wholly privately and not for publication—what's your opinion of a man who sues a woman for breach of promise?

A DISPATCH from Geneva tells us:

"As the world disarmament conference gasped on what appeared to be its deathbed today, a French spokesman expressed confidence that 'something will be done.'"

"In all events," he told the Associated Press, "France does not intend to permit anybody to throw the responsibility for the collapse on her shoulders."

WILL ROGERS says: BEVERLY HILLS, Calif., June 2.—Our governor, "Jimmy" Rolph, is very ill. Writers who rose in such glee to denounce him for doing nothing but speaking from the heart and not from political tact, they broke his heart.

Now let them, before commenting further, speak of some of the fine human qualities he possessed. Few men ever in public life will leave more real friends. Our country's structure is built on "let the law take its course," but there has been more the matter with our laws, our courts and our justice than there has with Jimmy Rolph.

Editorial writers were against you, Jimmy (for they have to write for their public), but, gosh, it must do your old heart good to know how many mothers were for you.

Yours, Will Rogers

Several small quantities of wool have been stolen recently, and attempts made to steal others. Recently, wool thieves rolled several sacks away from the storing place at the O'Connor ranch at Spring lake, but apparently were frightened away and left the wool on a hillside.

California Chief Ends Long Battle At San Jose Ranch

Famous Governor of Golden State Closes Long Career in Political Life in Southland; Frank Merriam New Executive

SAN JOSE, Calif., June 2. (AP)—Governor James Rolph Jr., of California, 64, died today at nearby Linforth ranch where he had been ill for two weeks with lung congestion and a failing heart.

The governor, who had been virtually invalid since he was stricken at Marysville, February 28, while on a campaign tour, died at 1:30 p. m.

Expecting death at any hour, physicians had called his family and his closest friend, Theodore J. Roche, state motor vehicle director, to his bedside late Tuesday when his condition took a sudden turn for the worse.

The death of Rolph automatically elevated Lieutenant Governor Frank F. Merriam of Long Beach to the position of acting governor. The 67-year-old native of Hopkinton, Ia., planned to be sworn in immediately.

Any officer can administer the oath. Merriam, however, will continue to hold the title of lieutenant governor.

On the members of the disastrous 1906 fire and earthquake Governor Rolph rose from San Francisco's Mission district, where he was born to prominence and a picturesque political career. He organized a relief association which used his livery stables as headquarters in caring for the homeless and aiding in the rebuilding of the city.

Mayor in 1911 In 1911 he was first elected mayor of San Francisco, and was re-elected to four other terms. During the late war his fortunes boomed as his shipping business prospered. The post war depression, however, cut deeply into the Rolph fortunes, and in a public statement a few weeks ago, in which he said he would not be a candidate for re-election, he declared he was broken not only in health, but in finances.

He was elected governor of California in 1930.

BY UNITED PRESS The name of James Rolph, Jr., is written inextricably into the colorful pattern of California's history.

Rolph grew with the state. He was mayor of San Francisco for five terms and was California's republican governor when he died. Son of a Scotch mother and English father, Rolph was armed with his mother's dry wit and an inherent joy of living. When California invited the world as its guest, he played host—his favorite role. He loved play.

Many Honors Received Modern sophistication tempered his mellow, old California elegance and he became a world-famed figure—his lapel Gardenia, immaculate boots and his jovial ruddy countenance and sparkling (Continued on Page Three)
