Editorials On the Day's News

By FRANK JENKINS IN THIS column yesterday, you read of a lump of raw, virgin gold picked up in the hills of Southern Oregon, weighing 34 ounces and seven pennyweights, and worth $1015.

HERE is a confession: This writer, gazing upon that lump of raw, virgin gold, felt a stirring of the pulses, a quickening of the fingers—a desire, that is, to head out into the hills and hunt on his own account for raw, virgin gold.

IT WASN'T the amount of money represented by the value of that lump of gold.

There is something elemental about a chunk of virgin gold; some strange, romantic thrill that quickens the imagination.

Deny it all you will. It is there.

NATE OTTERBEIN, of this office, who has lived a reasonably long and full life, and has seen much, agrees with this writer that this is so.

Nate was in Seattle at the time of the great Klondike rush, and saw many of the miners, the lucky ones, come out of Alaska, loaded down with sudden wealth.

These men, he says, spent their money feverishly, with little apparent attempt to get the worth of it as it was spent.

Their chief purpose, Nate says, appeared to be to get rid of their money, to throw it away in riotous living, to unburden themselves of it, so that they might get back into the hills and the gulches of the Klondike and take up again the search for the raw, virgin gold.

Not all of them, of course, but a sufficient number of them to be impressive.

THIS writer was not alone in the viewing of that lump of gold that Bob Burns picked up in Southern Oregon the other day.

A dozen others stood around and looked it over, and hefted it, and marveled at its size and color.

Listen: In the eyes of nearly all of them was a strange glitter, induced by that chunk of virgin gold lying there in their hands.

You could see it plainly, if you looked.

RAW GOLD, when found, has a mighty thrill. And raw gold, when MISSED, leaves a soared wound that never quite heals.

WILL ROGERS says:

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., June 7.—Well, Amerley was finally notified "diplomatically" that England wouldn't pay the debt. That's what practically all the people of both nations knew all the time, but even though a diplomat is the last person to find anything out, I knew the news would finally leak out to 'em.

The news hit us like the news that Babe Ruth bats left-handed, but was we down-hearted? No, sir. On that very day congress voted seven billions, so our own credit is all right. From now on we will do all our borrowing and loaning on the home grounds.

Yours, Will Rogers

RESERVATIONS FOR EMERGENCIES MADE

Announcement on Controverted Issue Comes With Long Study.

WASHINGTON, June 7 (AP)—The NRA committed itself today against all price fixing in codes except in clear cut emergencies.

The new policy also sharply modifies the bases for price sections in all codes, negotiation instead of compulsion to be used to get coded industries to revise such sections on the revised bases.

Pronouncement by the recovery administrator on the controverted price question, followed months of study. It will govern all future codes, and industries already coded are to be approached at once with the request for voluntary amendments to conform with the new policy.

Price Service Planned The purpose is to obviate destructive price cutting while reducing to a minimum opportunities for artificial maintenance of high prices, and similar developments which have caused complaint.

The arrangement will permit open price provisions in codes where desired by an industry, but on the condition that prices be reported to a confidential interested agency for distribution to all members of the industry and customers willing to pay for the service.

Such posted price may not be revised upward within 48 hours but may be reduced without time limit. The prices posted will represent actual transactions or offers and there will be no waiting period during which competitors may make arrangement for a uniform price.

The new policy also encourages adoption by industries of model cost finding and accounting provisions but expressly provides that no accounting method may be forced on any company by the code authority or other firms.

OREGON SENATOR NOT IMPRESSED

McNary Displeased by Republican Action At Chicago.

CHICAGO, June 7 (AP)—Herbert Hoover, former president, today sent a telegram to the republican national committee, as it greeted its new chairman, Henry P. Fletcher, and praised the new "platform" adopted yesterday.

The firm declaration by the committee of republican principles and purposes will hear from not only republicans but the whole country," Mr. Hoover said.

"For even those who disagree with us will realize the vital importance of scrutiny and constructive debate of all proposals, and opposition to those which will hurt the progress and welfare of the country."
