Farm Credit Plan Progresses Here

with a total commitment of $81,000. Nineteen more loans are well toward completion.
McMullen reviewed the history of government help in agricultural credit since 1913, and told how the farm credit administration recently was organized to centralize the activities of a number of credit agencies that had been developed to meet depression needs.
The Klamath Production Credit corporation was organized last fall, and now has a capital of $155,000. The first 50 days of the organization, McMullen said, were largely spent in fighting to raise the limit and to extend jurisdiction to territory in Siskiyou and Modoc counties, contiguous to Klamath county, but at first placed in other jurisdictions by setting of arbitrary lines. The extension was accomplished and the loan limit raised so that it is now possible to lend as high as $75,000 to an individual.
"This great area now has an institution capable of taking care of all the legitimate needs of agriculture," McMullen paid tribute to the commercial banks of Klamath Falls and Lakeview, the business interests, newspapers, and all who helped in the effort to make the production credit program here adequate to care for the needs of this region.
The bitterling fish lays its eggs on the pond mussel; the young hatch out in the mussel's gills and use its shell as a nursery.
The United States used about half of the 1933 world production of 130,000 tons of tin.

the longshore strike was called May 9 today held up the expected release of all Seattle-Alaska shipping.
Steamship company officials desire to retain them when the Alaska trade is resumed.
"Other employees, up and down the coast," said Joseph P. Ryan, International Longshoremen Association president, "have told us 'if we (the employees) win this strike you fellows will never work for us again.'
"So we say 'all right, then the men who refused to go on strike shouldn't work with us."
"That is what is holding up the Alaska-Seattle settlement."

Add It to Milk; There You Are!

Lemon juice and milk. That's a combination that used to mean curdled milk. But there's a way to avoid that. Always add lemon or orange juice to the milk, rather than the milk to the juice. There will be even less difficulty if the milk is either very cold or very hot, rather than at room temperature.

tined full tilt in its drought relief efforts.
"Good general rains," ranging from one-half to one inch or more were reported by the weather bureau to have fallen in the Dakotas, Northern Nebraska, Western Minnesota, Central Montana and the Northwestern part of Iowa. Lighter rains, about one-quarter inch, fell in Eastern Montana.
BISMARCK, N. D., June 7. (AP)—"A $40,000,000 rain" drenched the parched, sun-baked prairies of North Dakota last night and today. The fall was general in the state.
BURNS, Ore., June 7. (AP)—Taking issue with statements from the state department of agriculture, James J. Donegan, chairman of the Harney county relief committee, declared Wednesday "unless financial aid is given by the government the livestock industry in Harney county will be more than 50 per cent destroyed" by the drought.
