How to Red and Blue To Please Men Expert Says.

Men like women best in red and second best in an ugly light blue that, left to themselves, women would never in the world wear. The male prefers himself in dark clothes but women take to him most when he dresses in gray.

These are the pronouncements of Henrietta Murdock, of New York, famous colorist who is paid fabulous sums for color advice by manufacturers of everything from cereals to wall paint. Miss Murdock bases her conviction on tests she has made upon thousands of men and women, some of whom knowingly served as her guinea pigs, while others unwittingly revealed color behavior that was enlightening to the colorist's practiced eye.

"Black and white in dress is sophisticated, but not necessarily old," says Miss Murdock. "However, black worn alone adds years to anybody's age. And if you think black makes you look smaller in a bright light, you've forgotten about the jungle's lesson in protective coloring. A man's character is shown in the shape of his hat. The tie he unconsciously chooses for any given day reflects what his mood was when he got up that morning. Also there is a shade of every color that is becoming to every human being."

Miss Murdock has been studying color and design since she was a little girl of 14 in West Virginia. Her experiments began when her sister married, moved to Japan and sent back prints from there. The young Henrietta was enchanted with hues such as she had never seen before and all alone and unaided, began to work with fabrics and color. She even made some of her own dyes. She hadn't known before what she wanted to be but from then on, she cared only about color. Later she spent years in the Orient studying.

"Anybody can teach herself to know color and thus add to her joy in life about one hundred per cent, as well as keep herself from looking drab," Miss Murdock declares. While her instructions to this end seem simple, the colorist maintains they are adequate.

"Ah you need do," she counsels, "is to look at the color around you, indoors and out, with seeing eyes. Think about it as you go about your household work. Constantly create picturesque color effects. Notice the harmony of a yellow egg in a blue bowl, and a red tomato on a green plate. Set a white flower in a blue vase on a dark wood table and study the effect. Learn to name colors accurately—to see the difference between lettuce-green and grass-green.

"Memorize a tone and carry it in your mind as you would a melody. I can do this with any color except blue. The reason I can't do it with blue is because that particular color varies so with humidity."

Some very simple people, according to Miss Murdock, have perfect color sense—the mountaineers of West Virginia for instance, though of course they don't know the science back of it all.

Miss Murdock's own complex task which seems quite easy to her is causing color to behave in such a way that everyday articles will become more useful and enjoyable for human use. She also is able to make people more attractive by giving them color personality readings.

A man and woman nearly all through life differ in their color tastes. Miss Murdock points out. Until they are six, they agree in liking red. From six to twelve girls like coral pink and orange, and boys bright blue. In their teens boys turn to drab grays and browns, and girls stick to orange, peacock blue and pink. Boys past twenty like pastels, but women do not care for those until they are thirty or more. Miss Murdock's appreciation of orchid and violet tones and then the color sense begins to decline so that the man of 50 again likes a bright red tie.

Among other accessories are a sweater or two, flat-heeled walking shoes and some a bit more dressy with higher heels, about three hats and as many bags, belts for sweaters and gloves as you can afford. Don't get the idea that a black suit doesn't lend itself to variety. It does. Accessories do the trick.

One chic black suit is single-breasted with wide lapels and interesting stitching down the sides of the front and around the collar. A shirt-bow with pleated bosom comes in a luscious shade of dusty rose and the hat's feather repeats the color of the blouse.

The extra skirt is a very dark gray herringbone and is worn with a Persian rose sweater, pique belt and gloves. The extra sweater, for football games and the country, buttons down the front and comes in vivid red. The extra blouse is white satin with rows of stitching for trimming.

If you choose a black suit, an

MOTHER CROCKETT PRIZES QUILT

When the Crockett family appears in person at the Pelican theatre Sunday and Monday, the stage hands will be permitted to set up and handle the various pieces of equipment—with one exception.

The exception is "Ma" Crockett's famous "Friendship Quilt," and nobody but Ma is going to touch that! She brought it along to show her radio friends who come to see the stage performance, but she's making mighty sure this Pacific coast tour doesn't injure her prize quilt.

The quilt was made by Ma Crockett herself from pieces of silk and other beautiful fabrics sent in from all parts of the United States and Canada. Most of the pieces were accompanied by warm letters of friendship from people whose fireside hours had been made happier by the down-right "human" entertainment presented by this great radio family.

Although the Crockett family show has been greeted with applause from start to finish wherever they have appeared, Ma Crockett and her quilt always get the biggest hand of all.

In one Oregon town, Allen Crockett, the family comedian, wanted to borrow the quilt to use in one of his numbers. Ma Crockett promptly boxed his ears; and since then the family has left Ma's quilt very much alone.

Corn-Hog Program Faces Referendum During Next Week

A nation-wide referendum on the corn-hog benefit payment program will be conducted next week, with Saturday, October 26, the final day for balloting.

Assistant County Agent Henkle, who has charge of the program in Klamath county, announced Friday that he had mailed a ballot to every corn-hog benefit contract signer in the area, with instructions that it be marked and mailed back immediately to his office in the federal building here.

Question to be decided by the producers is "Do you favor a corn-hog adjustment program to follow the 1936 program which expires November 30, 1935?"

Henkle pointed out that not only contract signers but any hog raiser in the years 1934 or 1935 was eligible to vote.

Polls will be open in the assistant agent's office at the post office on Saturday, October 26, for those who do not receive ballots by mail.

Dapper Tailored Suit Nucleus Of Wardrobe

NEA Service Staff Correspondent NEW YORK.—There aren't enough adjectives in the English language to praise adequately a well-fitting tailored suit of good material.

Talk if you must about the virtues of clothes inspired by the classical beauties of ancient paintings and sculpture, but when all is said and done, from standpoint of good taste and practicality, a tailored suit with an extra skirt and the right accessories is the perfect answer to the observation, "But I have nothing to wear today."

Be sure, of course, that the suit you pick is well cut with enough fullness in the skirt to let you walk like a healthy, normal human being and a jacket with seams that won't pull out when you stretch your arms.

The fabric should have the kind of surface that doesn't get shiny and, in addition, be closely woven so as to hold its shape. If you are out to get an outfit of which you won't tire and one that will be as smart next fall as it is right now, select black, dark brown, oxford gray or navy blue.

An extra skirt in a harmonizing shade or in subtle check, plaid or herringbone design will prolong the life of the suit, give you something to wear when the regular skirt is at the cleaner's and add variety to the one-outfit-daytime-wardrobe.

If you choose a black suit, an oxford gray skirt is sure to be satisfactory. And a gray and blue checked one will be good with a blue suit.

Accessories must include at least two blouses, one strictly tailored in shirtwaist effect and the other a bit more dressy for days when you want to wear the suit to a smart luncheon or tea. The first should be made of silk that can go to the laundry frequently.

Among other accessories are a sweater or two, flat-heeled walking shoes and some a bit more dressy with higher heels, about three hats and as many bags, belts for sweaters and gloves as you can afford. Don't get the idea that a black suit doesn't lend itself to variety. It does. Accessories do the trick.
