COUNTY TAX RATE WILL BE HIGHER

The American Legion Hallways party was such a huge success, that it was decided to make it an annual event.

Approximately 400 children with their parents assembled at Legion hall about 7:30 o'clock Thursday evening to enjoy the party.

The youngsters were in costume, and the judges were aided in their selection of prize winners by the applause of the audience.

First prize for the prettiest and best arranged costume went to Betty Ann Westling, who wore a dainty Japanese kimono. The second prize for the best dressed child went to Ward Payne, who appeared as the Devil carrying his long handled fork.

Award for the funniest make-up went to Donald Clerk, who impersonated Jimmy Durante, using a hollowed potato for the famous "mushmouth".

The second prize for the funniest costume was divided between Charles McCandless and John Foster, who created the famous "Spark Plug" by hanging a few gunny sacks over their own frames.

Billie William Hayes, a small white-haired boy, who appeared with an equally small black dog, took first prize for boy and pet, and second prizes went to Little Charlotte Rose Carter and to Cecil Drew.

First prize for the most disreputable costume went to Lester Lindow, who appeared as a tramp, and the second prize in this contest went to Lawrence Mitchell who was disguised as a negro.

Robert Thompson was general chairman of the Legion party and William Canton, Clyde Thompson and Robert McGhee acted as judges.

Commander Tom Young wishes to thank all children and parents who cooperated to make the party such a great success.

Another large Halloween party was enjoyed by 31 pupils of Miss Helen Quinn's eighth grade class at Mills school.

Miss Quinn entertained the children with Halloween fun and games at her home at 1335 Crescent avenue, and refreshments were served to the young guests at the close of the evening.

ing a notable example—are selling the corn and hogs we used to sell but aren't selling now because we haven't got them to sell. Here on the Pacific Coast, for about the first time in history, Argentine corn has appeared on our markets, selling in competition with corn from the Middle West.

RIGHT now it is FINE.

The Southern cotton planter greatly prefers to sell his cotton to the government at a guaranteed price of 10 or 12 cents a pound to selling it on world markets at a lower price.

The Western corn and hog grower would much rather be hired by the government NOT to raise corn and hogs than to take his own chances of raising them and then selling at a loss. You can't blame ANYBODY for taking advantage of a situation that offers so many PRESENT benefits.

But neither can we escape the conclusion that out of this situation a HEADACHE IS COMING.

IT IS as if we all got together here in Klamath Falls and raised the price of everything we have to sell—including wages.

For a while, it would be lovely. The higher prices would make fat profits for those in business and the higher wages would make fat living for those who work.

But human beings, you know, are peculiar. They insist on buying where they can buy the cheapest and selling where they can sell the highest.

In the course of time, those who formerly bought here would buy elsewhere, because they would be able to buy cheaper elsewhere, and those who formerly sold elsewhere would SELL HERE, because they would be able to sell higher here. That would ruin us.

THAT is exactly what the United States is doing under its AAA policy of restricting production and boosting prices. As prices rise and production falls, others are selling what we formerly sold.

STARS OF DOGDOM WILL APPEAR HERE

It has been a long time since a famous motion picture star paid a personal visit to Klamath Falls, but the arrival of two such celebrities.

Klondike and Juneau, two giant malemute dogs, both of whom are featured players in Jack London's "Call of the Wild" to be presented at the Pelican theatre, are the distinguished visitors, and will appear in person on the stage with every screen show during the three-day engagement of the picture, beginning Saturday.

Klondike, whose history is more colorful than his beautiful mate's, was born in Little America during Admiral Byrd's first Antarctic expedition in 1930.

He was later taken to Alaska, and became the lead dog in the team which took the famous Father Hubbard into Aniakchak. He later led the team which took Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh and his wife into the frozen north. Since his debut in motion pictures, this canine traveler has appeared in two important roles. His first was in "Eskimo," and his second the present engagement with Juneau in the "Call of the Wild."

"Men, I believe you'll say the same thing once you taste my whiskeys. Just sip my whiskeys straight—and you'll understand why people are saying: 'They're the finest tasting low-priced whiskeys since Repeal!'"
