

NEW DEALERS OPEN ATTACK ON AL SMITH

he advocated social changes and now he calls them socialistic and communistic."

Roosevelt Is Silent

While President Roosevelt remained silent, political leaders were seeking to reckon the campaign significance of Smith's projected "walk" if the democratic convention endorses the administration as expected.

Liberty League headquarters reported a rush of commendatory letters. Telegrams covered the desk of Stephen A. Early, a secretary of the president, but he would not divulge their contents.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27. (UP)

Former Governor Alfred E. Smith, speaking before a cheering American Liberty League audience, struck with all his eloquence Saturday night at the new deal and called upon President Roosevelt to abandon "socialistic" trends for a return to the 1932 democratic platform.

Smith said he was not a candidate for any nomination by any party nor was he speaking as the representative of any group.

Dropping easily into the homey technique of his 1928 "happy warrior" campaign, Smith played the Roosevelt administration.

Audience Cheers

The audience whooped its appreciation of the man from the sidewalks of New York.

"Make a test of yourself," he cried to the audience of 2,000 that was jammed in the Mayflower hotel ball room and to those throughout the country who heard him by radio.

"Get a platform of the Democratic party and a platform of the Socialist party."

"Scratch out the planks that haven't been acted on and then put your hand on the ones that most nearly conform to what the administration has done."

Spending Assisted

His gruff voice mounted to a crescendo. Smith leaned far forward, red-faced and ready for battle.

"You will," he shouted, "pick up the Socialist platform," "pick up the Socialist platform," "pick up the Socialist platform."

Smith assailed government spending in his discussion of the platform plank referring to balancing the budget.

Hoarse and eloquent, Smith ripped into the Roosevelt administration with all of his power.

One by one he recited the planks of the 1932 Democratic platform; told how it was praised by all observers and how it had created confidence in the administration taking office in 1932.

Middle Class Must Pay

Then, pausing dramatically, his hands spread wide apart, the former governor said:

"Well, here we are. We've borrowed so much that we've hit a new high for federal deficit," he said. "Well, that wouldn't worry me if it solved our problem. But at the end of three years, we're just where we started and the farm problem we still have with us."

Smith attacked "demagoguery" and efforts to "set class against class," urging that both labor and industry must be protected.

"Forget the rich," he said. "They can't pay this debt. They ain't got enough. The poor aren't going to pay either. The great middle class is going to pay—and that's the only way they won't know they are doing it."

The graying, ruddy-faced New Yorker spoke in accents of the Bowery to his fashionably dressed audience. He complained that the New Deal sought to alter the constitution without consulting the people; that New Deal spending programs had failed to solve the depression's problems.

Then, leaning grimly toward his listeners and measuring his words with care, Smith came to a peroration in which he warned the administration that a "red Moscow" could not be transplanted to the United States.

"There can be only one capital—Washington or Moscow," he said solemnly as quiet spread over the tense crowd.

President Listens

Cheer after cheer greeted the biting attack which Smith, calling himself a man "without an axe to grind," launched upon the man who was once his close personal friend and who sat tonight at the White House radio listening to the broadcast.

Every word came grimly from his lips. All of the wisecracks, the pleasantness of his speech were thrust into the background as the man who came up from New York's sidewalks put his warning to America.

"There can be the clear, pure, fresh air of free America, or the foul breath of communistic Russia," he said.

"There can be only one flag, the stars and stripes, or the red flag of the Godless nation of the Soviet."

"There can be only one victor. If the constitution wins, we win. But if the constitution—stop!"

"Stop there. The constitution can't lose. The fact is, it has already won, but the news has not yet reached certain ears."

As the hoarse and weary Smith turned away, applause shook the room.

WEATHER FORECAST UNSETTLED HERE

Unsettled weather with light snow or rain is in forecast for the Klamath basin during the next 24 hours, according to both local and state weather bureaus.

A brief snow storm of Sunday afternoon gave way to rain during the night, and .04 of an inch of precipitation was chalked up at the U. S. weather bureau as a result of the shower.

Little change in barometric pressure has been reported during the past 48 hours, and little change in temperature is predicted.

Monday's minimum was recorded at 31, and the mercury rose to 44 degrees for the day's high point.

Sunday night there were three inches of new snow on the Klamath Falls-Bend highway over Sun Mountain but the road is clear. Chains are not necessary but it is advisable to have them along. The Lakeview highway had one inch of new snow on Quartz Mountain during the night. Chains are not necessary but it is advisable to have them along.

No new snow was reported on any of the other main highways. At Crater Lake, the south entrance road is open and in good condition to Government Camp. Chains are not necessary but are advisable. The road from Government Camp to the rim is still closed. The west entrance road is closed between the western park boundary and the Diamond Lake Junction. There were two inches of new snow at Government Camp Sunday night.

The snow depth there is now 124 inches, with 96 inches of snow at Annie Springs. Skiing is excellent.

Many Attend Snow Sport Try-outs

Approximately 200 persons gathered at the ski jump near Port Klamath Sunday to witness try-outs of the Crater Lake Ski club's jumpers. They were preparing for next Sunday's events at Mt. Shasta, when the Shasta Snowmen will hold their 1936 sanctioned meet.

Klamath Snow Club held no Sunday program, due to the Crater Lake club's events. On Tuesday night the Snow Clubmen will hold their 1936 sanctioned meet.

vote, but the "pressure" barrage of past years was noticeably lacking.

The original bonus law—providing for issuance of adjusted service certificates in 1935 and maturing in 1945 based on $1 a day for continental and $1.25 a day for foreign service plus 25 per cent and interest at 4 per cent compounded annually—went on the books in 1924 over President Coolidge's veto. The house passed it 313 to 78 over the veto and the senate 59 to 16.

Reclamation Chief Passes

the faculty of the Colorado Agricultural college and was professor of irrigation practices at the University of California from 1898 to 1907. In the latter year he resigned to take the chairmanship of the rivers and water supply commission of Victoria, Australia. He returned to the University of California in 1915.

Appointed reclamation commissioner by President Coolidge in 1924, Mead took part in huge government power projects. He saw the development of the $165,000,000 Boulder Canyon project which includes the Boulder dam and the All-American canal, and the Grand Coulee project in Washington state.

Mead was a native of Patriot, Ind., and was graduated from Purdue University in 1882.

The death of Dr. Elwood Mead, commissioner of reclamation, brought remarks of regret from many Klamath people Monday. Dr. Mead had visited here many times, he was personally acquainted with a number of local men, and he always was keenly interested in the Klamath project, one of the most successful under his department.

Layton Stevens of the local reclamation office expressed the sorrow of all of the reclamation employees. He cited Dr. Mead's long service with the bureau, his familiarity with all the problems of reclamation, and his close contact with all the projects.

B. E. Hayden, superintendent of the reclamation project here, was out of town. He has been in Washington on business, and will return in a day or two. Presumably, he conferred with Dr. Mead only a few days ago.

Dr. Mead's last visit to Klamath Falls was last mid-summer. He came here on a swing through the west, and conferred informally with local men at the chamber of commerce, on the Tulake sump land problem. Although well into his seventies, he appeared vigorous and well at the time.

Among those expressing regret and sorrow at Dr. Mead's death was A. L. Crawford, secretary of the Klamath irrigation district.

Auditor Arrives for County Check

H. R. Welshon of The Dalles arrived here Monday to make the Klamath county audit.

He was awarded the contract at $500. The papers were signed with the county court Monday morning, and the auditor is expected to go to work Tuesday.

tution CAN'T LOSE. The fact is, it has already won but the news hasn't yet reached certain ears!"

AL SMITH's speech on Saturday night marks a turning point in American political history.

For a generation in this country the party system has been a joke. The two great parties have stood for nothing more than jobs and spoils and power. Voters have been Republicans or Democrats for no better reason than that their fathers were Republican or Democrats before them. Since the issue of slavery was settled, there has been no issue between the parties in which people BELIEVED and for which they were willing to FIGHT.

Al Smith changed all that the other night, and gave to the nation an issue on which it can HONESTLY DIVIDE—the issue of free Americanism versus European radicalism.

He minced no words in doing it.

Last Vigil for King

Radioed to America from England for NEA Service and The Herald-News, this picture takes you to the bier of King George V in the chapel of the little parish church of Mary Magdalene within the shadow of Sandringham House, where Britain's aged ruler died. Standing at attention around the flag-draped, flower-covered bier (center) can be seen the figures of foresters and gamekeepers, who maintained a faithful vigil day and night until the body was taken to London.

NEUTRALITY BILL GAINS APPROVAL

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27. (AP)—The house foreign affairs committee today approved the administration's permanent neutrality bill.

The bill, approved by an 11 to 1 committee vote, would impose mandatory embargoes on arms, munitions, and implements of war, give the president discretionary power to embargo shipments of war materials in excess of normal trade and ban loans and credits beyond those needed for normal trade purposes.

Socialist Labor Event Set Tuesday

Under the auspices of the local organization of the socialist labor party, Eric Haas, national organizer, will give a public lecture at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening on the subject: "Can the Townsend Plan Restore Prosperity?" This lecture will be held in the Mills school auditorium on East Main street.

Diseases Reported—Only two contagious diseases, both of which were among Indian children at Klamath Agency, were reported to the health unit for the week ending January 25. One of these was a case of spinal meningitis and the other pneumonia.

Man Found Dead Sunday Evening

Ed Hall, cook, died in his sleep Sunday evening while resting at the Central Labor Temple, according to reports of Dr. George H. Adler, county coroner, and investigating officers from police headquarters.

The man had lain down, and apparently fallen asleep. He never awakened.

Hall, who was between 45 and 50 years of age, had recently returned to Klamath Falls after serving a 10 months sentence at a federal prison work camp. He had been sent up from this city after conviction on charges of selling liquor to Indians, police records show.

Preparation Made for Friday Voting

Election preparations for the special balloting Friday have been completed by the county clerk's office.

Supplies for all election boards were ready Monday for turning over to the sheriff's office, which in turn will deliver the supplies to the board officials.

Several boards have already received supplies.

There's lots more interest in the weather than in the Friday election. This week will find a good many citizens giving their first attention to the details of the measures to be decided at the special balloting. Chances are the vote will be light.
