Dude Chick Well-Known at Rodeos
Cowboy-Wrestler Hit Big Shows of West. Rode for Late Senator Warren of Wyoming. Round-up Tricks Applied to Grappling.

Dude Chick, the man with the bulldog headlock, the larrikin spin and who puts on a body scissors as though he were hugging the back of a wild horse, is a wrestler by profession but a cowboy at heart.

Chick, who hails from the Pole Creek ranch at Pine Bluff in Wyoming, followed the rodeo trail from 1922 until he began professional wrestling in 1928. Even now in the summer when he returns to Wyoming his name can still be found on the list of entries at major stampedes.

He has followed all the big western shows and through the seven years of his major competition he collected frequent trophies as a bulldozer and a bronco buster.

He was one of the top hands in the big Pendleton round-up from 1922 to 1927. In 1926 he won the day's prize for bulldozing a steer in 11 seconds at the Cheyenne round-up.

Chick was born on a Wyoming ranch and lived there until 1928. He rode for the late Senator Francis Warren, Governor Carey and Charley Irwin. Irwin, when he was alive, was the organizer of some of the far west's greatest round-ups.

Helen Warren, Stanford university co-ed, whose picture appeared in Wednesday's Herald, was taught to ride by the wrestler. She is the granddaughter of Senator Warren and her father, Fred Warren, is one of the most powerful ranch owners in Wyoming.

Wrestling and rodeo riding have something in common, the cowboy says. Wrestling is a little rougher, but the rodeos are more dangerous. Every major hold he uses was developed on the ranch. His sensational airplane spin is not unlike throwing a rope. His bulldog headlock is exactly the same as those he applied to steers.

Director of Athletics Charles Frankland said that Phelan's one-year contract "placed him on the same status as all other coaches and faculty members of the university."

Frankland also announced the signing of Cotton Wilcox, to one-year contract. Nothing was done in the case of Ralph "Pat" Welch, freshman coach, pending his return from a visit to Texas.

DISTRICT FOES CLASH FRIDAY

Klamath, Bend to Play Important Series Here.

Hitting their stride for the first time this season, the Lava Hoops of Bend completed their training Thursday and prepared to head south for the first of their two games against Klamath Falls here Friday and Saturday night.

The Bears, starting the season slowly, crushed La Pine Monday night, 31 to 14. It was Bend's final competition before the Klamath series.

Olson, Nettleton, Hendershot, Krog and Murry probably will be in the starting lineup for the Bears Friday night. It is the same combination that lost to Klamath several weeks ago.

Meanwhile, Dwight French, Klamath coach, was whipping his team into shape after setbacks against Medford, Grants Pass and Ashland. Many of the players who have been ill with colds will return for the Bend series.

Atkins, Saunders, Reginato, Giovanni, Durbin, Smith, Putman and Lensenfeld will be the squad from which the starting combination will be selected.

Baseball Prexy Gives Umpires Drama Lessons

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 30. (AP)—Dramatic acting will be introduced into Pacific Coast league baseball umpiring this season, if President Wilbur C. Tuttle has his way.

A former semi-pro arbiter himself, the new president got his histrionic ideas about how to call them from Babe Pinelli, National league umpire.

The new style prescribes that the first strike should be called mechanically, and only slight emphasis placed on the second. The outcry comes in on the final strike.

"On the third strike," Tuttle explains, "the umpire makes a grandiose gesture, starting from the dirt with his accusing finger and reaching to the high heavens, meantime bawling in a loud voice: 'Strike Three—ee, your-r out!'"

The same idea works on base running. When nothing is at stake, use routine gestures. When it's important—sweeping gestures, loud voice and great firmness.

It's lots of fun, Tuttle says, for everybody—the umpires, the players, and particularly the fans.

Tuttle still has two vacancies to fill among the eight umpires in the circuit. Despite his desire for drama, he gave no indication of going to the stage to get his men.

Prominently mentioned for the vacancies are Bert Cole, former southpaw hurler; Ray Keating, former Sacramento pitcher, and Paul Genesha of Sacramento, once a leading arbiter in the league.

Chiloquin Five Will Replace Balsiger Team

The Chiloquin Lumbermen, one of the strongest basketball quintets in the county, were voted into the City league Wednesday night.

The Lumbermen will take over the position formerly held by Balsiger and will go into action next week.

Since the second half schedule is just getting started, the Lumbermen will enter the league on an even basis with the other members. Balsiger had not yet started its second half schedule.

The Maccabees will be the first team to face Chiloquin. This will come next Wednesday. Bonanza and the Sons of Italy will play the other half of the doubleheader.

Next Thursday the Knights of Columbus meet Old Fort and Lost River plays Malin.

With the addition of Chiloquin, the strength of the league and the balance of power between the teams has been vastly improved.

Helen Moody, Net Champion, Turns to Painting

By Mary Elizabeth Plummer (Associated Press Staff Writer) NEW YORK, Jan. 30. (AP)—Helen Willis Moody, artist, author and world's woman tennis champion, is painting eggplant, tomatoes and celery.

One of the tennis star's new oils, finished since her triumph at Wimbledon last summer, is a still-life of brilliant-colored vegetables with a pink background.

Another, splashed against blue-gray, is a study of brown pottery, silvery bulbs and green narcissus shoots. She has painted several versions of San Francisco bay, which, she said, "is beautiful and different from every angle—I could spend my life there."

Her first "one-man" exhibition of oils will be held this spring in the Grand Central Art galleries, and, according to Erwin Barrie, manager of the galleries, "she's going to be good."

Helen Moody, Net Champion, Turns to Painting

Dressed in black, with a little block touque and pearls, Mrs. Moody conferred about the exhibition, and also about a new book which she is writing on tennis.

"Asked if she thinks her art as good as her tennis, she demurred, 'the onlooker will have to decide. I like them both, and think they go well together.'"

"I'm more interested in oils than I ever was in etchings, drawings and watercolor."

In San Francisco, she has been painting regularly every afternoon in her studio, which is connected with the Moody's apartment.
