Candidate Borah Busy These Days World's Fair Arising From Bay

A lifelong liberal Republican, but one who never allowed his liberalism to carry him outside the ranks of G. O. P. "regulars" in a campaign year, Senator William E. Borah of Idaho is a busy man these days as he presses aggressively into the battle for the presidential nomination. These three striking candid camera studies portray him blending politics with statecraft in his Washington office.

Where Death Struck 5 Merrymakers

Nearly 300 persons were dining and dancing in a Chinese-American restaurant at 59th street and Lexington avenue in New York when wisps of smoke filtering through the floor heralded a fire that brought death to five and injury to forty others. Many persons were trampled when panic-stricken guests fought to get down the narrow stairway from the upstairs dining room. Firemen are pictured fighting the fatal blaze.

You now gaze on the site of the San Francisco Bay World's Fair which will be held in 1939, celebrating completion of the world's two largest bridges. The site is a 365-acre shoal area off Yerba Buena Island, in San Francisco Bay, which is to be filled in by dredging. Above, a dredge unit at work; below, Leland W. Cutler, Exposition president, in rowboat on fair site. After the Exposition, the site will be used as a union airport.

OUT TO SPEAR A WINTER MEAL

Long before the white man came, Indians gathered like these at Celilo falls near The Dalles to take the choicest of salmon that means food when winter comes. Travelers along the Columbia River Highway never tire of watching Indians deftly spearing and netting fish when the runs are going up the river. In letters to the Travel and Information department of the Oregon State Highway Commission many 1935 tourists took occasion to say how much the Indians at Celilo had intrigued them.
