MRS. LEDA PARKER SPEAKER AT KUHS

By Bertha Haase
Mrs. Leda Parker of the Business and Professional Women of Klamath Falls, spoke Friday to the students of Klamath Union high school, who have taken over now taking both typing and shorthand on "How to Become a Good Secretary."

"A good secretary at all times should appear in a dignified manner," said Mrs. Parker, "for she is her boss' representative. She has to meet his clients. And a successful secretary is so accurate that she never asks again what her shorthand notes are."

The requirement of greatest importance, according to Mrs. Parker, is the accurate knowledge of the profession, including English and spelling as well as typing and shorthand. Loyalty to your boss and to his business is the next of importance, followed by diplomatic abilities, cheerfulness, even temperament, sense of humor, enthusiasm and patience.

"It is important to choose your clothes with great care, and if necessary to cultivate a pleasant speaking voice. It is also to your advantage to be a good listener," Mrs. Parker said.

Mrs. Parker answered several questions asked by students.

Flames Add to Heavy Toll of Pittsburgh Flood

As waters of the Allegheny River rose to record depths, flooding cities and towns with a heavy death toll and terrific property damage, a six-alarm fire raged in the two-block plant of the Waverly Oil Co., five miles from downtown Pittsburgh, Pa. Smoke is seen rolling up in tremendous billows from the plant, following blast after blast of oil drums. Firemen battled waist-deep in water to quell the blaze.

Administration Agrees to Allow WPA Investigation

WASHINGTON, March 21. (U.P.)—In reply to vigorous demands from the administration yielded Friday to republicans and critical democrats for a full congressional investigation of WPA and FERA relief activities.

The inquiry probably will be made by the obscure committee on expenditures for executive departments headed by Senator J. Hamilton Lewis, democrat, Illinois, who offered the resolution proposing the investigation. Expenditure of $5000 is proposed. Lewis' resolution was a revised draft of a similar measure introduced by Senator James Davis, republican, Pennsylvania, which was reported favorably by the expenditures committee but scuttled at the last moment by Senate Majority Leader Joe T. Robinson.

The modified proposal does not contain charges that WPA records have been suppressed and salary figures have been unavailable to congress which were embodied in the Davis resolution.

Simultaneously, it became known that as democratic leaders agreed to support the forthcoming inquiry they hastily filled two vacancies on Lewis' committee with ardent new dealers—Key Pittman, democrat, Nevada, and Alben Barkley, democrat, Kentucky. This assures that the inquiry will be controlled by democrats.

The battle about the relief inquiry began when Lewis blithely offered the favorable report of the expenditures committee on the Davis resolution. In addition to Lewis' endorsement, it had the support of two other democrats, Robert F. Wagner, New York, and Frederick Van Nuys, Indiana.

Robinson, stunned for a moment, arose and rushed to Lewis' seat. His eyes blazing, his face flushed, he argued heatedly. He apparently was firm because Robinson stomped to his seat.

Republicans tittered. In a few moments, the Illinois senator walked slowly to Robinson's desk and sat down. The argument began anew. Finally, Lewis withdrew the report, later introducing his substitute.

ing a loan beforehand and signing a note. They just wrote checks and later settled for the overdrafts. It was only with the advent of tighter banking laws and less permanent population that the custom died out.)

IN THIS connection, W. A. (Bill) Dezell some years ago told this writer an amusing story.

Shortly after the adoption of Oregon's first state banking law, a spruce young examiner appeared at the Brick Store to go over its banking business. After a half day spent on the books, he showed up before the owners practically foaming at the mouth.

"Do you know the fix you're in?" he demanded. "You've got a long line of loans out, and the only assets I can find are a big list of overdrafts! If you don't get out and get those overdrafts converted into bankable notes, you're as good as looking into the penitentiary doors right now!"

"The funny part of it," Bill added with a chuckle, "was that every one of those overdrafts was as good as gold."

Again, you see, the Brick Store knew its customers. ONE more tale, related the other day by Bert Hall: "One of the Brick Store's big accounts (a man well known over this whole country) ran on for several years, and finally was figured up for settlement. The owners looked over the figures and one of them shook his head. 'I don't think that's correct,' he said. 'We owe him money, instead of him owing us.'

"So they figured it again, over and over, and it finally turned out they DID owe him money—$19,000, which was promptly paid, to the great surprise of the customer, who hadn't kept track of it himself, and was astonished to learn that he had so much coming."

THEY were shrewd, capable business men, those proprietors of the old Brick Store, and they were out to make money for themselves. But they were HONEST.

Its valve-in-head design cuts gasoline consumption still lower because there is less loss of heat through the walls of the combustion chamber in valve-in-head engines, and the advanced construction of the Chevrolet engine gives maximum heat (or power) saving.

Most important of all, Chevrolet's more efficient cooling system, pressurestreaming and the greater accessibility of all working parts result in more dependable operation, over a longer period of time, with the lowest maintenance costs. Thus, Chevrolet's valve-in-head engine—only one of its kind in Chevrolet's price range—gives economy without equal.
