TERMS OF FARM ACT SIMPLIFIED

Simplification of terms and some new rulings on details vital in the far western region have been announced by George Farrell, director of the western division of the AAA. Officials of the Oregon State college extension service who are assisting in the educational campaign in connection with the new program believe that most of the new developments are of benefit to Oregon farmers planning to participate in the conservation work.

The limiting term "soil conservation" has been dropped, and henceforth the term "agricultural conservation program of the AAA" will be used in order to avoid confusion with the established work of the soil conservation service. The basic idea, of course, remains the same. As recently summed up by Director Farrell, it is "to help farmers bear the cost of planting more of their land to crops that are good for the soil and less to cash crops which deplete the soil and leave it exposed to erosion." Those are also the crops which have been burdened by dangerous surpluses.

A ruling has been made regarding orchard land which permits the classification of young orchards as crop land in figuring the soil depleting crop base for any farm. All orchards or vineyards that had not reached bearing age on January 1, 1936, are no longer to be considered as neutral,-as was the general rule for orchards at first.

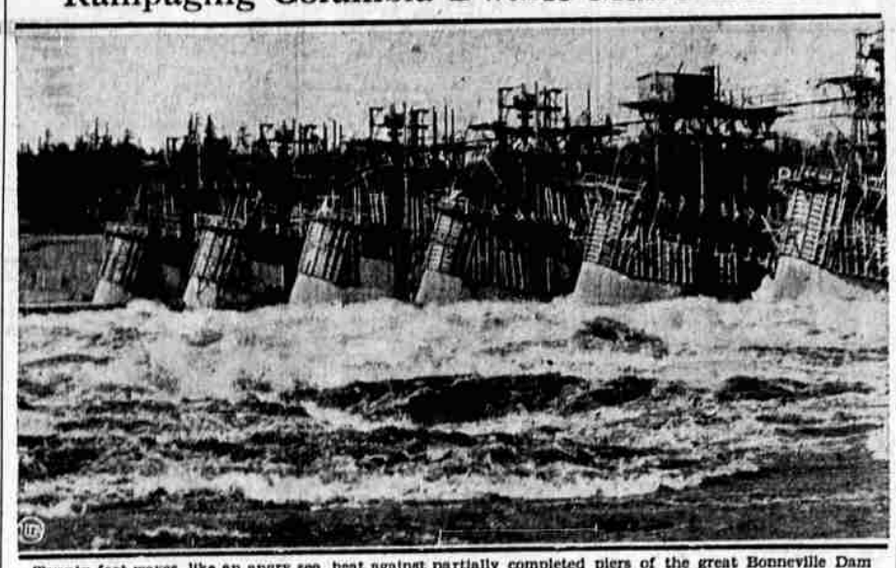
A final ruling is expected at any time on the classification of summer fallow land. The latest word is that it will probably be included with soil depleting acreage, and that county production factors in summer fallow counties will be adjusted accordingly. All county factors and rates of payment on soil building practices are expected to be announced definitely for Oregon early in May.

Former minimum diversion requirements have been eliminated in the new rulings. The first regulation made it necessary that a farmer divert 15 per cent of his soil depleting base to soil conservation uses in order to qualify for any soil conserving payment. The new rules provide that he may divert less than 15 per cent, but will have deducted from payments otherwise due, 1½ times the normal acreage rate on the acres he is deficient.

Hops, bulbs, vetch and Sudan grass are among minor specific crops added to the soil depleting list. Wheat or other small grains, either spring or fall planted, may be plowed under as green manure crops in qualifying for an acreage of soil conserving crops. Grains or grasses pastured, except in the case of winter pasturing of green manure crops, will not qualify.

There is no longer a double classification of soil conserving and soil building crops. All are now classified as soil conserving crops, and the Class 2 payments will be made for soil building practices which include the planting of certain soil conserving crops.

Rampaging Columbia Dwarfs Man's Efforts



Twenty-foot waves, like an angry sea, beat against partially completed piers of the great Bonneville Dam on the Columbia River as spring freshets start. Mother Nature thus effectively ended man's work on the project until snow runoff subsides.

Henley Students on Tour of Mill

The American history and civics classes of Henley spent Wednesday touring the Weyerhaeuser lumber mill. About 25 students made the trip, which took them through the entire plant. The first place visited was the machine shop where they watched the men working at the big forges and lathes. They next visited the sawmill, then the power generating plant. Many of the students tried to guess the height of the smokestack and finally the guide told them it was 384 feet high. Next they visited the grading and storage sheds and the students were awed by the big electric cranes whizzing by overhead. The trip ended in the box factory.

SPECIAL BIBLE SERVICE SET

How many Bibles will be brought to church Sunday night at the Klamath Temple? The pastor of the church, Rev. Fred Hornshuh, is putting forth special effort at this service to see how many people still come to church with the book that is the best seller in the world. Over twelve million copies are sold annually.

All songs and the sermon of the evening will be about the Bible. The one who brings the largest Bible, the one who brings the smallest Bible, and the one who brings the oldest Bible will receive special recognition. It is hoped that 500 Bibles will come to the church on this special occasion.

Among the special numbers presented will be "My Mother's Bible," "Blessed Book," "Wonderful Words of Life," and "The Best Book to Have Is the Bible."

An intelligence test will also be given at the service to see who is the best posted person regarding these 66 books called "The Holy Bible."
