Welcome, K. C.

KNIGHTS of Columbus from throughout Oregon are gathered in Klamath Falls at this time for their state convention.

This community, pleased that it was selected for a state meeting of such importance, extends its welcome to the visitors.

Their choice of convention dates was most fortunate. Spring comes slowly and fitfully to the Klamath country, but when it does come it is pleasant and beautiful. This is the time to enjoy it.

There are many interesting places to visit in this vicinity, and during spare hours the visiting K. C.'s will want to see Crater Lake, the Lava Beds, the big mills, the farm country or some of the reservation places.

Here's a wish for a pleasant and successful convention for the Knights of Columbus.

The Lakeshore Surfacing

AN improvement that will be welcomed by hundreds of residents of this vicinity is the oil-surfacing of a section of the Klamath lake secondary highway, for which contracts have been let to Dunn and Baker of Klamath Falls.

This job will extend from a point about 300 feet on the city side of the Fremont bridge, on out to a point near the Geary seed elevator on Wocus marsh. This covers the heaviest traveled section of the highway, and it is hoped, of course, to push the surfacing on out in the near future.

The work will get underway about June 14, and probably will require about two months.

When this job is done, there will be a smooth road all the way to Moore park. Smooth pavement will extend beyond the homes along Lakeshore drive. The dust nuisance that is so unpleasant for motorists and Lakeshore drive residents alike, will be eliminated. Travelers to the resorts on the west side of Upper Klamath lake will move for the first five or six miles along dustless, smooth surfaces.

The state highway commission's decision to contract this surfacing was one of the best bits of road news we have had for quite some time.

There Is No Escape

THE inside stories of Alvin Karpis, Campbell, Mahan, and Robinson, as now revealed, are notable for this fact—that these public enemies could buy everything but happiness.

Karpis, for example, rented the finest apartments. He had choice rugs and expensive furniture, and ordered hothouse flowers daily for his living room. Good food and entertainment were at his command. But there was one thing he could never acquire—escape from himself.

Everywhere he turned he faced the demon of fear. It was laughing at him, taunting him, reminding him of the hot seat in the death house, telling him that every footstep outside the door was the law catching up with him.

And, of course, the law did catch up with him. For Karpis was the biggest fool in the world—a fool who thought he could lick the game and then forget about it.

P.-T.A. Notes

Roosevelt P.-T.A. held its last meeting of the year, May 19 at 8:00 o'clock.

A short business session followed, and installation of officers took place, with Mrs. R. Ross, past president of the Klamath county council, as installing officer.

The new officers are as follows: Mrs. Raymond Bigger, president; Mrs. Oscar Kluth, Mrs. W. A. Arnold, Mrs. Alfred Collier, vice presidents; Mrs. L. D. Boyle, secretary, and Miss Ruth Flood, treasurer.

Mrs. Ross also presented the silver cup awarded to the Klamath county P.-T.A. for the largest increase of members and associations.

Members and friends then viewed the art display done by the pupils of Miss Lieoullan, which was highly praised.

All adjourned to the tea room where Sig Ellingson delightfully entertained the group with his accordion during the tea hour.

Dainty refreshments were served, with Mrs. Landry, Mrs. Kent and Mrs. Blehn as hostesses.

Miss Leonard's and Miss Lieoullan's rooms were the books for the largest number of mothers present.

An executive meeting was held before the business session and final business was taken care of for the year.

Fairhaven Parent-Teacher's association is holding a public card party at their gymnasium next Friday night, May 29. Auction and pinochle will be played. The proceeds from this party will be used in sending one more child to Corvallis for the annual 4-H summer course in June.

Fairhaven had originally planned to send one boy and one girl to Corvallis, but the county selected Gerald Stippich and Howard Copeland, of Fairhaven, as two of the most outstanding club members in the county, as delegates. Fairhaven then decided to send two of its most outstanding girls, selecting Edith Overton as first choice.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

The Inside Story From The Capital

By PAUL MALLON

Copyright 1936, by Paul Mallon

WASHINGTON, MAY 25—The Healey labor bill was "laid on the table" by the house judiciary committee several weeks ago. When legislators do not want to vote against a bill and yet want to put it some place where no one will ever be able to find it, they "lay it on the table." What they really mean is that they are tossing it under the table.

Nevertheless, several distinguished committeemen were noted on their hands and knees the other day, rummaging around under the table looking for the discarded Healey bill.

Their actions caused considerable cloakroom speculation because everyone knew they were against the bill. They had killed the similar but stronger Walsh bill last session even against presidential wishes. Nothing had happened in the interim to cause them to change their minds. At least nothing that anyone outside knew about.

The search for the bill was successful, however, and arrangements were made to vote on it Tuesday.

DEAL?—

The significant thing is that the search was started immediately after president Green of the A. F. of L. wrote that letter to speaker Byrns, helping the new deal to kill the Frazier-Lemke inflation bill.

This significance is doubled by the fact that legislative agents for the labor people are now telling congressmen the Healey bill is No. 1 on the A. F. of L. list of most legislation for this session.

Indeed, several well informed congressmen will tell you flatly in private that reconsideration of the Healey bill is the price Mr. Green got for going to so much trouble to aid president in resisting the Frazier-Lemke onrush. They say it was an even swap, and nothing else was included in the deal.

EXPLANATIONS—

NOTE 1. There is some question about how much Mr. Green's letter helped the new deal in the Frazier-Lemke fight. The most prominent labor congressmen voted for the inflation bill, regardless of Mr. Green's advice. However, it furnished an adequate excuse to any congressman who wanted to vote against the bill.

Note 2. While speaker Byrns read the Green letter, the general inner understanding is that it was handed to him. He was apparently not in on the negotiations which led up to it. Only one new dealer is sufficiently powerful to have negotiated the deal.

Note 3. The back-stage understanding is that, if anything is done about the Healey bill, it will not be toward imposing NRA code hours and wages on all contractors doing business with the federal government (as provided in the original Walsh bill). Nor will it give Labor Secretary Perkins the right to fix hours and wages. Instead, it will be on a basis of requiring government contractors to pay prevailing wages. This idea is already in force on all federal public building contracts, but not on others.

GIVE-AND-TAKE

Near the end of a session like this, the inside pressure for legislation warms up to the boiling point. Not only does the president use pressure, but pressure is used on him.

For example, John L. Lewis, United Mine chief, has been seen prowling around the White House turnout room lately. Those close to him know he has been trying to induce the president to a statement favoring the new Guffey coal bill, and (provided he fails in that) to get the president to call in the congressional leaders and tell them privately the bill must be passed.

Congressional leaders are not saying so publicly, but they do not like the bill. The idea of federal price fixing, standing alone, without labor provisions, is repugnant to them. The bill will not be passed unless the president turns on a terrifying amount of heat.

DRAFT?—

There are two inside stories explaining Governor Lehman's retirement, but only one can be right. The story passed around in Albany was that the death of the governor's brother made it necessary for him to take active control of the Lehman banking firm. That cannot be considered very seriously because the bank is sufficiently well organized to get along without him.

A better explanation probably is that Governor Lehman was never personally happy in political life that he made up his mind three months ago not to run again, that President Roosevelt has been unable to talk him out of it, but still hopes to.

NOTES

Acting Budget Director Bell is a good bet for Comptroller General McCall's post in June. Bell does not want the budget director's job because he would lose his civil service status.

Democratic congressmen in cloakroom debate considered Postmaster General Farley's reference to the "Prairie State" candidate as a serious social error. They likened it to Miss Perkins talking about an undeveloped big shoe market being available among the big barefoot populace of the south several years ago.

The head of a western young G. O. P. organization complained to republican congressmen that there was less fight in the G. O. P. here than any place in the country. He could not understand it.

Ten Years Ago In Klamath

THE Southern Pacific Railroad company is assembling equipment for construction of its $800,000 terminal and railroad yards in Klamath Falls. Actual construction will begin within the next few weeks.

Opening of the Ashland-Klamath Falls highway and The Dalles-California highway in Klamath county will begin within 30 days, it was announced this morning by C. C. Seeley, resident engineer for the state highway department.

Another step toward the construction of the $124,000 viaduct over the South Sixth street railroad crossing will be taken tonight when the city council will adopt an ordinance providing for a special election at which the proposition of Klamath Falls issuing $82,000 in bonds to meet its share of the project will be placed before the people.

Telling the Editor

FROM JEFF BEAN

KLAMATH FALLS, Ore. (To the Editor)—Well, the race is over, and while I failed to get down the home stretch in time to witness the finish, I have learned from the paper that the democrats nominated a good man for sheriff. It would seem that six or seven thousand democrats in Klamath county did not even know there was a race on, however.

The encouragement of those who voted for me in the recent primary election is particularly appreciated in the knowledge that so many citizens share my ideas and ideals regarding the manner in which the office of sheriff should be conducted.

It would have been an honor to win, and I consider it no disgrace to lose, in competition with the four other party candidates. The campaign was clean from the beginning, and in this regard I wish to congratulate each other candidate upon the fairness and common-sense manifested.

I do hope that the citizens of Klamath county realize the importance of that right which is both a great privilege and a definite duty, and go to the polls this fall with a determination to make this the best county in the best state, in the best country in the world, in which we live.

Sincerely,
 JEFF BEAN,
 Democrat Candidate for Sheriff.

Airmail Line for Klamath Fades Out

Chances for immediate establishment of an airmail feeder line between Medford and Keno, via Klamath Falls, faded out of the picture when the drastic curtailments were ordered in the deficiency bill in congress.

Senator Frederick Steiwer, in a letter to the chamber of commerce, said that reduction of the funds left no money for establishment of an airmail feeder line between Medford and Keno, via Klamath Falls, faded out of the picture when the drastic curtailments were ordered in the deficiency bill in congress.

Wanted Liberty; Now Spurns It

Though his Liberal party long has demanded independence for Puerto Rico, Antonio Barcelo, above, flew to Washington to protest freedom of the territory under the terms of Senator Tydings' recently proposed bill. The measure, under which liberated Puerto Ricans would pay full duty on their exports to America, would ruin the islanders, Liberal party leaders said recently.

Four-H Members on Inspection Trip

Members of Klamath County 4-H beef club, their parents and many friends formed a caravan Sunday and visited Henley, Merrill and Malin clubs, inspecting calves being raised by members.

The caravan formed at 8:00 a. m. at Henley, and Henley club members displayed their calves first.

Picnic lunch was served in the Merrill park, and in the afternoon Merrill and Malin clubs were visited.

About 25 calves were inspected.
