Jail Problems

THE city council Monday night took up discussion of a new city jail because a real problem exists at the old jail in the basement of the city hall. It is inadequate to care for the heavy run of drunks and other prisoners on week-ends, unsanitary conditions exist, and the place is otherwise unsatisfactory.

Preliminary consideration will be given to the possibility of erecting a new jail house on land adjoining the city hall.

One wonders why study should not also be made of the possibility of working out a joint use plan with the county, in connection with the county jail. Possibly remodeling or enlargement of the county jail, which might be necessary to such a program, would be much cheaper than construction of a new city jail, and the cost might easily be saved by operating one consolidated establishment rather than two separate ones.

For one thing, this plan would solve the matron problem, as the county jail now has a matron, the city jail none. The city is flitting with trouble when it jails women prisoners in an establishment without a matron.

Study of a joint jail establishment might bring about one general law enforcement headquarters in Klamath Falls, where city police, sheriff's officers and state police would center their activities. That should work for closer co-ordination of those activities, eliminate confusion, increase manpower and general law enforcement service.

Traditional separation of city and county functions need not be carried to such an extent that agencies doing the same sort of work cannot be located in the same building and carry on their activities in close co-ordination. In this case, it might well work to public advantage. It is worth considering.

Possibly a Liability

THOSE headlines about Zioncheck's sanity tests seem a bit tardy. They should have appeared several weeks ago.

Richard Neuberger, who is writing for the Oregonian from Seattle about voter opinion of the wild Washington congressman, says that some people up there think Zioncheck is "crazy like a fox."

Maybe so, but the suggestion included in Neuberger's report that Zioncheck may be playing on the idea that name familiarity means votes doesn't sound so good to us.

It is true that sometimes name familiarity means votes. But that is usually when there are several candidates who are relatively unknown, and the voter picks one, whose name he happened to hear somewhere, hoping that he is marking his X for a good man.

In Zioncheck's case, conditions will be entirely different. No one will see Zioncheck's name on the ballot without knowing all about him. In his case, if the voters up there still have any intelligence, name familiarity will be a liability, not an asset.

The New Unemployed

THE National Youth Administration now estimates that at least 5,000,000 young men and women between 16 and 25 will be looking for jobs this summer. The N. Y. A. arrives at this approximation by adding, to the current four million odd out of work, 1,000,000 high school graduates and 130,000 to 140,000 college graduates.

Many of these young people will be placed in jobs at once. The prospects for young graduates are the best in five years, the government agency finds. This is true, among other reasons, because employers more and more are turning to high school and college-trained youths for new blood.

And so, despite today's huge unemployment problem, youth must not lose its interest in education. The road to gainful employment necessarily is longer these days, but in the end the best-prepared man reaches the goal first.

Chinook Lost After Four-Hour Fight on Light Trout Tackle

ROSEBURG, Ore., June 2. (AP)—The North Umpqua river country resounded today with praise for the great fight Arnold E. Jurgens, Roseburg carpenter, made to land a large Chinook salmon which took his 15-pound test leader as he was trout fishing.

With a large audience looking on, Jurgens played the quarry so artfully that it was four hours and 40 minutes before the fish got away.

Even then it was the spinner that broke under the strain.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

The Inside Story From The Capital

By PAUL MALLON

Copyright 1936, by Paul Mallon

WASHINGTON, June 2.—The mystifying Roosevelt technique on the tax bill is not essentially different from his established method. This big fight in the senate is more of a sparring contest with soft gloves than the brawl that it appears to be.

There is no doubt about the sincerity of President Roosevelt's sparring partners. They really believe even his modified house corporation tax plan is foolish and are trying to smash it. But at the same time they also know the heavyweight champ is merely practicing feinting with them.

The result of the match will be whatever he desires to make it.

ADAMANT

What perturbs them is the private information they have picked up at the White House, indicating that Mr. Roosevelt really wants the house plan, with some further necessary modifications.

In the private conferences they have been having off and on at the White House, it has developed that Mr. Roosevelt personally considers the corporate earnings distribution idea an excellent campaign issue. For that reason, as they understand it, he is not willing to let the idea drop until next year.

As their only chance to win is for the president to let them win, the only thing they can hope for is that he will change his mind.

EASY

The heavy hand which the champ holds over them is well illustrated by the inside strategy which the Roosevelt leaders have adopted.

At first they intended to offer the house corporation provision from the floor of the senate as an amendment. They thought there was a fair chance it would be adopted. In that event, the sparring match would be over. The issue would go no further.

But, after all, that house provision is too bad, even for them. Consequently, the treasury has worked out a series of corrective amendments. These will be offered to the senate. If adopted, or not adopted, the issue will go to a committee of senators and representatives who will write the final form of the bill. And these senators and representatives will be selected by Vice President Garner and Speaker Byrns. If they pick men who will not carry out presidential orders, they will be looking for jobs themselves soon.

It is all so easy, and has been done so often before, that there is really little inside excitement about it, except on the point of whether Mr. Roosevelt will relent.

Note—Another feature of the strategic plan is that the leaders will continue to talk about adjourning June 6, and really plan to do it June 9 or 10.

TIP

The inside story of how John Hamilton got the job as nominator for Gov. Landon is material for a textbook on success.

None of Landon's advisers wanted Hamilton to do the nominating. The task was thought to be of the type which William Allen White does best. Bill White has humanized Kansas itself, even convincing easterners, which is generally considered a major feat.

But Hamilton had an idea for a different type of nominating speech, not the old stock stuff about "a man who—" but a simple statement of human facts. He wrote out the speech carefully in advance, took it out to Governor Landon, and got the job immediately.

Landon's announcement of the selection was a surprise to some of the bigwigs here, who have never appreciated that a good way to get a job is to prove you can do it better than anyone else.

GATE OPEN

The best republican people are behind the current talk about Senator Vandenberg as vice presidential candidate. They have other things in mind beyond Vandenberg's personal future. One of these is Senator Borah.

Some persons who have been more or less in Borah's confidence have believed all along that his real presidential candidate was Vandenberg. Early in the game, before Borah announced himself, he frequently said as much in private. Vandenberg generally retorted in kind and pronounced himself in favor of Borah.

This was before the campaign got so serious, but it has encouraged aged the belief here that the nomination of Vandenberg as vice presidential candidate will open the gate for Borah to walk into the Landon fold.

NOTE—Vandenberg is one of the few candidates who has made no enemies in the pre-convention campaign. He is not Hiles, not Hoover. He is a friend of Cal. Knox, equally friendly with Borah, and has done nothing against Landon.

RETROSPECT

Borah's friends here have admired the way he has taken his primary discouragements. The fact that he personally knew from the first he would not win has not lessened their respect for the way he has conducted his campaign. He could not have known how bad it was going to be. And he did not know that he was going to get a raw deal from some of the local organizations, excited over the prospects of his money views.

NEW CITY JAIL CONSTRUCTION WINS SUPPORT

Crowded and insanitary conditions in the city jail brought about discussion preliminary to the construction of a new jail building for Klamath Falls at the Monday evening meeting of the city council.

City Engineer E. A. Thomas was instructed to launch an investigation into the possibility of obtaining funds either through the PWA or the WPA, and the finance committee was ordered to give study as to whether any federal funds granted to the project might be matched with money from the city's general fund, or whether to submit a special levy to a vote of the tax payers.

May Go Before Voters
 Should the finance committee decide that funds could easily be spared from a surplus in the general fund, the matter would be submitted to a vote of the people at the general election in November.

The new city jail would be constructed on land adjoining the city hall, according to preliminary and tentative plans of the council.

A complete report of the early survey of possibilities for construction of a jail, tentative costs, etc., will be presented to the council by the city engineer within the next few weeks, it was decided.

New Supplies Authorized
 In the meantime, the finance and police committees were authorized to purchase six double decker bunks for the jail, as well as a dozen and a half new blankets, in order that all prisoners may be taken care of when crowded conditions occur.

Complications arising from study of the new ordinance led the council to defer the third and final reading of this law until the next meeting of the council.

Section five of the ordinance was revised Monday evening by City Attorney J. H. Carnahan and the council to provide that the council, upon application made in writing, grant special licenses for commercial advertising including billboard and public address systems, upon receipt of a license fee paid in advance for such privileges.

Daily License Fee
 This license fee was tentatively set at $5 per day, and provided that the advertising apparatus and matter be under the control of the council to the end that the intent and meaning of the ordinance to banish noise not be circumvented.

The ordinance revision also provides that the council may revoke any license granted under this section when the body is convinced that such action would be to the best interest of the city. No such license for commercial advertising will be assignable without consent of the council.

Further study of the ordinance will be carried on throughout the coming week, and it will come up for third and final reading Monday, June 8.

Wall Found Unsafe
 In razing a frame building between Fourth and Fifth streets on Main street, it was discovered that a wall of the building now occupied by the Safeway store is crumbling and unsafe, according to reports of Fire Chief Keith K. Ambrose and Henry Schorion, building inspector.

A sewer pipe in this section is also in poor condition, the officers reported. The council recommended that the fire chief and building inspector take whatever action is necessary to compel owners of the structure to repair the wall in accordance with the law and building code before construction of the new building adjoining proceeds. The new building is being built by the Butler Construction company for the owner, J. O. Beardsley.

Connors Lease Authorized
 Upon recommendation from the street committee the council disallowed an application for a loading platform in front of a second hand store on Klamath avenue.

The mayor and police judge were authorized to sign a contract with Gertrude and William Connors, leasing them a property in Fairview addition at a rental of $6 a month. The lease is unassignable.

The city recently foreclosed upon the Connors' property for unpaid taxes, but Connors is bedridden, and the council decided that the humane action would be to allow them to occupy the house in spite of foreclosure. An ordinance granting the lease was passed after third and final reading.

Traffic Lights Discussed
 The council authorized City Engineer E. A. Thomas to enter into an agreement with the Union Oil company for re-alignment of a sidewalk on the company's property at Eleventh and Main streets, to correspond to a sidewalk in front of the Elk hotel.

The matter of traffic lights at busy intersections on Main street came up for discussion, but no action was taken. The city engineer reported that a study of last winter's traffic count carried on with the help of the national youth administration, showed some direction of traffic to be necessary at least at Sixth and Main street and Ninth and Main street intersections.

Deed Accepted
 The city accepted a deed from the Western Building and Loan company for an alley on lot 9, block 27 of First addition, and the deed was placed on file.

Reports from various city departments were accepted and building permits and various license applications authorized by proper inspectors were allowed by the council.

New Caretaker's House Will Go Up

A new caretaker's house is to be built at the Crooked Creek fish hatchery, according to State Game Commissioner Riley.

Accommodations for the caretaker's family at the hatchery are regarded as entirely unsatisfactory, and for several years there has been talk of improving them. This year, Riley said, he expects the house to be built.

GARDENING

By Garden Scout

Conger avenue, one of the oldest sections of the city, and one which retains a wealth of beauty with its lovely old trees, pools and deep, green lawns, was visited recently by the scouts of the Klamath Falls library club looking for flowers for the annual show, which will be held Thursday afternoon, June 4, in the Fremont school gymnasium.

One of the gardens where we stopped was that of Mrs. John Martin. The lovely white colonial house, set far back from the street with a foreground of old fruit trees which have grown in such interesting shapes with the years, has a wide sweep of green lawn which makes it one of the most delightful residences in the city.

The house, designed and built by Mrs. William Duncan, was so designed to conform with these lovely trees, and those in the rear garden are just as fine as those in front.

It is in this garden that a pool and surrounding flowers form a charming vista from the windows of the house.

The day the scouts visited the garden the tulips and narcissus were gone, there were just a few tulips, but their places were being taken by vivid colored pyrethrum, columbine, one of our favorites, and several clumps of cheerful blue flax, one of the most delicate of the garden flora.

An elm tree overshadows the pool, and there is a large cluster of water crocus, we thought enchanting. Down the long driveway to the garden there is a hedge of iris, now in bloom, and several weeks ago the white and purple lilacs were beautiful.

Mrs. Martin is working in the classifications committee toward the success of the flower show next Thursday.
