They Call It Politics

By Carter Field
WASHINGTON, July 24.—Several tremendously significant points in the first poll this year of The Farm Journal escaped general notice. In fact, not sufficient attention was paid to the entire poll, as it just so happens that this poll is the only one now being conducted that has ever stood the test of a close election. It happened to be right in 1916, as well as in the subsequent landfalls.

Two states stand out like sore thumbs in the preliminary figures. One is Wisconsin, which most republican leaders have been cheerfully conceding to Franklin D. Roosevelt because of the La Follette influence, which everyone has assumed would be cast for Roosevelt after the preliminary maneuvers have been completed. But the farmers of the state, in this poll, so far have voted 1974 for Alf M. Landon to 870 for Roosevelt. Apparently the Wisconsin farmers, who have not benefited as much as many others from AAA, etc., Wisconsin being a very diversified state agriculturally, are voting their old political alignments.

garden as heavily democratic. This is the section represented in The Farm Journal's poll. In discounting this it must be remembered that the old republican machine in St. Louis has long since disintegrated, while the democratic machine in Kansas City is regarded as better than Tammany ever thought of being—proportionately to population.

Against these two dark spots for the new deal there is Iowa, which most political observers have been regarding as safely republican, especially since the primary in which Senator L. J. Dickinson won so handily, and in which the G. O. P. vote so far exceeded the democratic primary outturn. Iowa voted 1584 for Roosevelt to 992 for Landon.

This is especially discouraging to republicans, who had hoped that not only would they get the electoral votes, but would elect New Deal foe Dickinson, and elect some other republican in place of Democratic Senator Louis Murphy, killed in a recent automobile accident.

Offsetting this is the big pro-Landon vote of the Nebraska farmers, 955 to 308, despite Senator George W. Norris' preference for Roosevelt. The only surprise in this to the Landon lieutenants was the proportion. They have been counting on Nebraska, but by a small margin. The Oklahoma figures are very interesting—610 for Roosevelt to 541 for Landon. Friends of the Kansas governor say the farmers are the backbone of the state's democracy, while Landon will pile up the votes among the oil men.

Update New York voting 3169 to 779 for Landon promises that Tammany will have to extend itself in the greater city, while Pennsylvania farmers, voting 1861 to 895 for the republican nominee, make James A. Farley's claim of Pennsylvania look optimistic.

Algoma Library Branch to Open

Algoma branch of the Klamath county library will be open on Tuesday and Friday afternoons and evenings beginning July 28.

This branch library which has been open one day a week since it was started a year and a half ago, has become so busy that it is necessary to keep it open longer hours than heretofore.

This library, which is sponsored by the Algoma Lumber company, has a reading room where patrons may browse and read magazines or books.

Popular Mechanics magazine has recently been subscribed for and other magazines are donated by friends of the library.

The new hours for opening are from two till four and from seven till nine on Tuesdays and Fridays of each week.

Miss Eleanor Nabakowski is in charge of the branch library which contains about 350 books for adults and children.

UP-STATE RECOGNIZED
(Bond Bulletin)
Definitely an up-state organization and one reflecting the mildly progressive trend of Oregon republicanism is that completed in Portland yesterday, in the final voting by the state committee members, Arthur W. Prialux of Clatsop was given his second term as chairman.

Under the handicap of inexperience, and against a secondary, but high-rolling democratic wave, Prialux headed his party in Oregon at the elections two years ago, and made rather a remarkable showing. This year, better qualified than before, and with the confidence of his organization already won, Prialux should be a valuable confidence-inspiring leader.

Prialux is a weekly newspaper publisher. It may be significant, or it may not, that the second highest office in the state republican organization is held by Lars Bladine, also publisher of a small town newspaper. Bladine is secretary of the state committee. The paper which he and his son publish in McMinnville is one of the outstanding weeklies in Oregon. Treasurer Lloyd Smith is a reelection, and gives representation to important Multnomah county.

Even more interesting than this analysis of the party's executive personnel, however, is the political concentration which now becomes apparent in Klamath county. Prialux, as has been mentioned, hails from Clatsop, which is in Klamath; Claude McCulloch, democratic chairman in Oregon, is from Klamath Falls, and so is Willis Mahoney, number one Townsend ferment, and perennial candidate.

From now on, things should move rapidly in Klamath county.

Welcome to Moose

ANOTHER state convention is underway in Klamath Falls, and the hospitable people of this city extend a hearty welcome to the members of the Loyal Order of Moose.

Although it is mid-summer, we believe the visitors will find the climate to their liking, and the country pleasant to behold. Indications are that convention days will be a bit cooler than the past torrid spell, but even if the mercury goes high, the heat is not so oppressive in this high altitude as elsewhere. Those who take the time to drive out into the agricultural district surrounding Klamath Falls will find the crops growing on prosperous farms. Crater Lake, the Lava Beds, and the mountain resorts, beckon pleasure-seeking convention delegates.

Klamath Falls is happy to play host to the Moose. We hope and believe they will decide that they chose well when, at Eugene last year, they named Klamath Falls their 1936 convention city.

Women in Beer Parlors

THE liquor commission is worried about women in the beer parlors. It may require women to sit at tables or booths before being permitted to quaff the foamy liquid in public dispensaries.

This concern about the fair sex on the part of the male members of the liquor board harks back to the dear old days when women weren't permitted to enter a saloon. It's the sort of sentiment that inspires the frequently heard remark that the beer parlor is worse than the saloon.

But times have changed, and so have the gals. They demand equality with men in everything from drinking to running for the United States senate. You may think that the spectacle of a woman drinking or smoking in public is too bad, but that doesn't mean you can do anything about it.

It certainly isn't doing much about it to force a woman to sit down to do her public drinking.

Lindbergh's Reminder

THERE was a grave warning in Colonel Lindbergh's address to the Nazi aviation leaders in Berlin Tuesday, when he reminded them of the responsibility they bear for the deadly weapons they have created.

One need only let his imagination run on into another great war to realize what Colonel Lindbergh meant. No longer are the slaughter and butchery of war confined to the battlefields. Whole cities of civilian population—old men, women, little children—can be wiped out by the use of those weapons of which Colonel Lindbergh spoke.

That he sought to awaken some realization of the responsibility which belongs to the men of the air was indicative of the sort of man Colonel Lindbergh is—a man of whom America can be proud.

As far as we can make out, Father Coughlin's apology to President Roosevelt goes about like this: "I meant what I said, but I'm sorry I said it because the reaction hasn't been so good."

Governor Landon, we gather, was not startled when notified that he was the republican nominee.
