Intimations of Fall Herald Coming Change in Tempo of Society

SHORTER days, hints of fall in the cool of the evening air, smart autumn togs appearing in shop windows, all bring intimations of Indian summer days to come.

Shorter days and longer evenings will soon be bringing with them a new round of activities and a new impetus to social functions.

In the meantime summer cabins, golf links, tennis courts and parties vie with informal parties and midsummer weddings for attention and interest on the social stage.

The first days didn't matter, because I was so sure the absence that you asked for could never quite endure.

But goldenrod and gentians replace the daffodils. We found one April morning sun-wakened on the hills. Poise is a gift of autumn; To it my spirit yields. . . . But old dreams flame an instant Where smug burns the fields. "Ultimatum." —Helen Velshimer.
