TULELAKE SCHOOL OPENS AUGUST 31

TULELAKE, Aug. 21 — Tulelake high school will open for the fall term of school Monday, August 31, and while no definite announcement has been made by Jerome Keeler, principal of the elementary school, it is expected that students in the grades will also enter classes on the same date.

George Reiben, principal of the high school, announces that all teaching positions have been filled and one new teacher, Lynn Keeler, has been employed to teach agriculture and band. Agriculture, formerly taught in the Tulelake schools, was discontinued two years ago.

Plans for building an addition to the school building, drawn up by Stark and Planders, Sacramento, are at a standstill, PWA officials fearing inclement weather if the structure is started this fall. However, congestion in the high school may speed up plans so that the work may be started before next spring.

Principal Reiben in a statement issued this week expects the largest enrollment this term in the history of Tulelake schools.

The following list includes teachers who will serve this year and the subjects they will teach: George Reiben, shop and algebra.

Edward Phelps, physics, plane geometry, general science, algebra and chemistry.

Laurence Pool, American history, economics, mechanical drawing, ancient history, athletic coach.

Lynn Kellar, agriculture and band.

Alice Gray, biology, art, Latin, Spanish and sewing.

Florence Peterson, bookkeeping, typing, English, shorthand, business training.

Josephine Jarvenin, English, cooking, girl's athletic coach.

Faculty members of the elementary school are Jerome Keeler, Edna Heide, Johanna Sullivan, Edward Esmond, Gerald Albertson.
