

KLAMATH MAN INVENTS NEW TYPE WINDOW

A Klamath Falls man, Guy Shields, of 500 North Ninth street, has invented a new type of window built of ponderosa pine, the "Shields silent sealed window," which he claims combines all the adaptability and insulating qualities of wood with the artistry and ease of operation of metal frames and sashes.

The invention will be on display in the windows of the chamber of commerce office.

Shields' window has a wood frame and moves with ease. There are no stops used; wood does not touch wood at any point. Sash travel is controlled by metal tracks or slideways, and when closed, the window is entirely sealed.

Among features recommending the window, the inventor lists the following: (1) one style of frame for all types of construction, frame, brick, brick veneer or stucco; (2) quick, positive assembly; (3) easy movement; (4) economical to manufacture, meaning less carrying stock to distributor; (5) artistically correct; (6) architecturally correct.

The window operates without sash weights, pulleys or cords by means of a simple sash holder inserted in the sash stile. The window "free wheels" up to the desired point where it is retained by the holder. Lowering is effected by touching the lever on the holder, which works on an 8 to 1 ratio. The inventor claims its efficiency is not affected by shrinkage or expansion.

Perfect insulation between sashes, sill and head and between sash and metal is another advantage claimed for the Shields window.

Shields describes the evolution of his invention. "I sold many carloads of K. D. frames in the east. In 1926 the stock frames began losing the markets rapidly. The reason—a desire for more beauty, something attractive. There resulted a big pick-up in French windows. "Next steel entered the scene in a big way. Steel windows gave the home owner more art, more beauty. But that was all. Metal windows require 33 1-3 per cent more heating capacity. Metal shrinks in cold weather and expands when hot.

"Metal and French windows are both hard to screen and curtain. They give wrong air circulation. The double-hung window gives syphon circulation.

"I got the idea that something should be done to combine the practical features of old-style windows with the beauty of more modern types—and this window resulted."

As to materials and methods of manufacture, Shields says "Klamath Falls is the center of the ponderosa pine belt—the ideal wood for sash and frames. The builder of the frames should manufacture or at least control manufacture of the sash for the frame. This insures a finished product, exactly correct, to the distributor."

HENLEY CANNERS ENTERTAIN WOMEN

The Happy Henley Canners entertained the Ladies Aid of this community Wednesday, August 19 at the Mt. Laki church.

An exhibition of the girls' fruit was fixed on a very becoming table and three women, Mrs. Lawrence Birk, Mrs. Orb Campbell and Mrs. Scott Thompson from the Ladies Aid, judged the fruit and the best jars received ribbons.

The program started with a skit called "The Spirit of 4-H," given by the canning girls. Some of the girls who play musical instruments played two numbers, "Follow the Glean" and "A Long, Long Trail." Barbara LaPrairie played two numbers on the piano, "The Flower Song" and "Santa Lucia."

After the program the Ladies Aid held its regular meeting and the canning girls served refreshments of punch and cookies.

The girls had exhibits on display, and these exhibits were judged by Mrs. Orb Campbell, Mrs. Scott Thompson and Mrs. Lawrence Birk.

SURVEY WILL PLACE HUNTER IN LAKE AREA

Virtual assurance that the United States biological survey will place a predatory animal hunter on the upper northwest side of Upper Klamath lake during the months of September, October and November, has been received by County Agent C. A. Henderson from Roy Fugate, district agent for the U. S. B. S. in Oregon.

This hunter will be paid entirely out of government funds, according to Fugate, and if funds are adequate, and results satisfactory, the biological survey may arrange for permanent location of a hunter in that area.

Heavy loss of young ducks and geese, amounting to hundreds of thousands, according to the county agent, has occurred on the upper northwest side of Upper Klamath lake, where coyotes have fed unhindered on young game birds in the refuge.

Heavy losses of sheep and lambs have also been attributed to coyotes, and because of this, Henderson recently asked the U. S. B. S. to put a permanent hunter there.

Heretofore trappers paid from co-operative funds have made infrequent trips to the Upper lake, and have taken numerous coyotes, but the control project has been inadequate.

Portland, Ore., Aug. 21 (U.P.).—Governor Clarence D. Martin tonight declared there was no emergency in the Seattle strike of employes of the Post-Intelligencer and said he would not intervene until all other means of settling the dispute had failed. The governor, speaking over a northwest radio hookup "as governor and not as a candidate for public office," said there was no occasion for use of the national guard. He declared extremists on both sides had attempted to make it appear that there was a breakdown of law and order in Seattle.
