Tule Lake Situation

THE unfortunate flood on Tule lake leased land demonstrates the situation that has led to thus far unsuccessful agitation for removal of sump waters from the Tule lake basin into Lower Klamath lake. Since PWA first started, there has been talk of such a project, and a meeting or two has been devoted to it. Thus far, nothing has come of it. There is divided opinion whether anything ever can come of it.

With the return of the wet cycle, it has become increasingly evident that the area devoted to actual water storage in Tule lake would have to be enlarged. In fact, plans for the new leasing to be made this fall, call for enlarging the actual sump by another 3500 acres. When the sump is extended, it takes out of production valuable farming land. It was to preserve this land for permanent production that sump water removal projects were urged.

Many Klamath people do not fully understand the Tule lake situation. This basin, at one time, held a body of water covering approximately 96,000 acres. As a part of the Klamath reclamation project, the lake was drained, and part of the fertile lake bed was opened for homesteads. However, the engineers, taking into consideration such things as moisture records, run-offs, etc., advised the government to retain some 40,000 acres, for the purpose of taking care of the water that would still run into the basin.

As the dry cycle came on, it became apparent that not all of this 40,000 acres was needed for water storage. The government began leasing the land to private operators, who threw up dikes against the water and planted the land to crops. The water was confined in an area of about 10,000 acres.

Then the return to wetter weather. The natural flow into the Tule lake basin (which has no outlet) plus the run-off from the irrigation operations on the farms of the valley, has poured an increasing volume of water into the sump. Impounded behind the private dikes, it has pressed against them with increasing force, until the break has developed.

It stands to reason that the economic value of at least part of the sump (leased) lands is going to have to be forfeited, so long as the present system is in operation. The leases returned more cash two years ago than the irrigated lands of the project, and this year they promised a return of hundreds of thousands of dollars. It is not easy to give up such land.

Sergeant M. J. Barnes has given good service as game warden and state policeman for many years. He has been courteous, hard-working, and devoted to duty. He retires from public service to go into private business with the best wishes of a host of friends. Mr. Barnes is to be succeeded here by O. A. MacKinnon, former Klamath Falls policeman, an officer of ability who has made an excellent record in state police service. Jim Busch, who also has resigned as state policeman, has given good service here, and has our best wishes as he goes into other activities.

Some People Say

Taking a chance is one of the characteristics of the human race. We wouldn't be here today, working for a living, were it not for the fact that Adam, at Eve's suggestion, took a chance.—Arthur J. W. Hilly, New York City.

There will be no war. British people do not want one and the world generally had enough unpleasantness during the last war.—King Edward VIII of Great Britain.

There can be no distinction between men and women drivers. The women themselves have dissolved any such distinction by drinking and smoking on equal terms with men. They must accept the same responsibility.—Judge Joseph A. Graber, Chicago.

If families only kept up the old family Bible the way they used to do, there would be no trouble about when and where the applicants (for old age pensions) were born. The Bible seems to have gone the way of all flesh.—Welfare Commissioner James C. Lee, Buffalo.

If I make a million or if I only make a thousand, I'll put it in a trust fund and government bonds, because I know fame is fleeting.—Jesse Owens, U. S. Olympic star.

Music has a cooling influence that practically produces the effect of air conditioning. Melody, the streamlined part of music, is never hot; and therefore, harmony and rhythm are the best hot weather remedies that I can think of.—Prof. H. A. Smith, Boston University School of Music.

It is time that these busy-bodies are told what their ancestors fought for. The members of the DAR are being unfaithful to the memories of those ancestors.—Louis M. Hacker, lecturer on economics, Columbia University.

The best movie actors are babies and ducks, because they are the least self-conscious and the most natural in front of the camera. For the same reason I believe the Dionne quintuplets are the best movie actors in the world.—Otis Skinner, actor.

A bee's sting is only one-thirtieth second of an inch long, and the other two feet is imagination.—J. H. French, director, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

Spain is lost either way the civil war ends. She is already lost. This war has set her back a generation.—Sir William Wiseman, New York banker.

You've gotta make a lot of noise if you want to go to Washington. And I'm the man that can do it.—Bossy' Gillis, former Newburyport, Mass., mayor.

Nero fiddled while Rome burned, but it remained for the men and women of this supposedly civilized century to witness the atrocity of a government burning its wheat fields while the people formed breadlines.—B. F. Baker, Buffalo, N. Y.

Of all nations of the world today, we are in many ways most singularly blessed. Our closest neighbors are good neighbors. If there are remoter nations that wish us not good but ill, they know that we are strong; they know that we can well defend ourselves and defend our neighbors.—President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

I didn't steal it. I stumbled over it and was too lazy to walk around it—so I just pushed it away.—George Tipton, of Tulsa, Okla., arrested for stealing lawn mower.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

The Inside Story From The Capital

By PAUL MALLON
 Copyright 1934, by Paul Mallon

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—Certain high republican counselors are supposed to have suggested to Governor Landon an extension of the new method of campaigning with which he has been experimenting. They want him to:

(a) Make no more than four additional speeches.

(b) Embark on a more extensive campaign tour than any presidential candidate has ever tried, devoting six weeks or more to "get-acquainted visits" to every town on a railroad, making only short, frank talks, "thinking out loud," shaking hands, smiling, being himself.

(c) Institute a new kind of a publicity campaign designed to dramatize the Landon personality with human little stories, about his likes, dislikes, habits, etc.

Developments along that line may be expected.

Note—The argument is heard increasingly among republican authorities that the Kansas is not dramatizing his opposition to President Roosevelt. His speeches lack great lustre, they say. The crowd wants more snappy phrases, more aggressiveness in talk and action, more punch. This, they contend, is necessary to arouse all the Roosevelt opposition and swing it into line behind his leadership. Some concessions may be made to those complainants, but the calm and unexciting tone of the campaign will be maintained.

HESITANCY

Some of Mr. Roosevelt's advisers had their fingers crossed when he left for the west. His trip has been curtailed in an effort to make it snappy and straight to the point. (The first stop scheduled was Bismarck, N. D.). At the same time they were not certain how it would come out.

As they look at it, Mr. Roosevelt has been getting along all right, and is gambling with fortune in this latest venture. The meeting with Landon is considered an extremely delicate undertaking, requiring very careful handling.

In view of the unusual circumstances, the trip was more carefully planned, step-by-step, and word-by-word, than any the president has made before. Those arrangements have somewhat allayed apprehensions about the political reaction to the trip, but not entirely.

You can start an argument in any capitol corridor by bringing up the subject of whether the meeting with Landon is considered a help or hurt Mr. Roosevelt.

Democratic arguers can prove it was a typical stroke of Roosevelt luck, because it gave him a chance to demonstrate his theories of federal relief and control.

Republican rebutters present an equally firm argument that rising prices of foodstuffs is causing dissatisfaction.

They both may be right, before election day. The exhibition of new deal relief work is now on; rising prices have only begun. Cities will undoubtedly begin to feel the pinch first. The only political question is not whether the pinch will come, but when.

Note—There are some extremely humble people (the Townsends, for example) who think droughts are a retaliation of providence.

MONOLOGUE
 This La Follette investigation of civil liberties is a one-man show, but it has some very important stagehands whose names do not appear in the cast of characters.

So far as public appearances are concerned, the investigating committee was originally composed of three members. Senator Murphy died, Senator Thomas announced he could not be here during August and September. This left Senator La Follette as a full committee in himself. He has no trouble rounding up a quorum. All committee actions are by unanimous consent.

What he is after is the labor situation, particularly in steel. He will go into it next month and it is rather generally expected his unofficial consultants include no smaller personages than John L. Lewis and Mr. Roosevelt himself.

"Now, watch, everybody! Here comes the biggest thrill of the whole reel. I'm about to get a bite!"

At least not officially. Mr. Cornelius Van Enckert still remains in Addis Ababa as our official "minister to Ethiopia." The empire has disappeared.

The state department, however, has no delusions that this diplomatic absurdity makes any difference.

Practical requirements will eventually take Mr. Van Enckert away from Addis Ababa. Then no successor will be appointed. This will leave a consular representation there which will constitute de facto recognition of Italy's conquest.

The wheels of diplomacy grind slowly.

SERIOUS INJURY • The train crew was narrowly averted last night at 9 o'clock, when locomotive No. 3 of the Oregon, California and Eastern railroad plunged off the rails just south of the city boundary line and near the Altamont camp ground.

Cause of the accident was not definitely known, although it is believed that a split switch, where a short spur line from the Oregon state highway maintenance shops joins the O. C. & E. main line, is responsible.

The track was torn up for 50 feet, ties reduced to splinters and rails to twisted steel. Damage to the engine could not be estimated.

Auto Plunges Into Canal; Two Escape

TULELAKE, Aug. 25.—A man and wife escaped death in an irrigation canal west of here tonight when they were pulled out through the windows of their car after the machine had collided on a narrow bridge with one driven by Jim Stevenson and plunged into the water-filled ditch.

The couple is named Reed, the man being an employee of Dr. C. O. Prentice. Mrs. Reed suffered undetermined head and body injuries, while neither Reed nor Stevenson was seriously hurt.

Both cars were badly damaged. The African Alpine swift, during the course of a morning's feeding, often wanders 80 miles or more from its nightly roosting place.

PORTLAND, Aug. 26 (AP)—Yes, even a lion-tamer has his moments of fear. Clyde Beatty, here with the Cole Brothers-Clyde Beatty circus admitted it.

"I'm human like anybody else," he said. "You have to have a certain amount of fear—if you didn't you would go in too carelessly. When one of those big cats hits me, now boy I'm scared. But you can't show fear, they would detect it too quickly and take advantage of it."

Beatty expressed a preference for lions over tigers as performers, saying they had more showmanship.

"A lion is quite a bluffer," he added. "Nine times out of ten when he comes after you he's only bluffing—all you have to do is know when he's bluffing."

FOREST GROVE, Ore., Aug. 26 (AP)—Camps of the Consolidated Lumber and Conacher Lumber companies near here were practically deserted last night after a walkout by 650 men.

PORTLAND, Aug. 26 (AP)—Sewage-sealing tours have displaced sight-seeing tours for numerous Portland club women this week.
