Ickes On Hearst

It is apparently Honest Harold Ickes' assignment in the current presidential campaign to try, at all hazards, to keep the Hearst banner flying over the Landon bailiwick. Mr. Ickes' latest attempt to link Mr. Hearst and Mr. Landon falls rather flat. He charges, in brief, that Hearst told an Illinois republican leader that Landon ought to do a minimum of speech-making. That, says Mr. Ickes, is complete and final proof that Landon is nothing more or less than a slave of the sinister and dangerous Mr. Hearst.

Coming at a time when Mr. Landon has been making a series of speeches across a whole section of the country, Mr. Ickes' discovery does nothing more than prove that if Hearst did tell Landon not to make any speeches, Landon ignored the advice.

Thus, Mr. Ickes has neatly proved that Landon is not under the Hearst thumb. In view of the fact Mr. Ickes has set out to prove just the opposite, perhaps the New Deal strategists had better advise HIM not to make any more speeches.

Light Destroys Evil

A MEETING of Michigan police officials, formulating plans to reduce crime, noted that the decline in organized racketeering is due largely to newspaper publicity.

Often a man who had been paying tribute to racketeers for years awoke for the first time to exactly what was going on when he read an account of the racket in his newspaper. For the first time he realized what a sucker he was. Then it was only a matter of the victims of rackets getting together to stop them.

Newspapers, if read carefully, can give the public a vast amount of information on what is going on in its midst. The criticism that newspapers do not contain enough valuable information comes from those who have never troubled to read more than the headlines.

All evils fall when the light is turned strongly enough on them.

Unhappy Host

ELSEWHERE on this page will be found the complaint of a desperate gentleman whose summer has been ruined by visits of relatives, near-relatives and would-be relatives.

We gather that they have been coming down on him in droves, staying with him until the cupboard is bare, and then leaving him high and dry, their new cars flashing haughtily up the road.

Here is a public complaint that no doubt will arouse private sympathy in many a heart. Our frank correspondent says that if we will run his article, he will hang it in the yard, presumably to inform unwelcome visitors just what he thinks of them.

Well, here it is on this page. Maybe many a pair of scissors will be snipping out the letter ere this is read.

Telling the Editor

KLAMATH FALLS, Ore.—(To the Editor)—May I have a little space in your columns?

We say we wonder where our summer earnings have gone, now that it feels like fall is upon us.

Yes, I do; and I wonder why in hell the new cars for $25.00 a month can't stay on the road they start out on, in place of looking up all the cousins and in-laws they ever heard of to make us poor people feed and lodge them for their trip, so they can go back home and exclaim: "Oh, my, what a wonderful trip it was!" And we, the goats, are still trying to pay the bills for their enjoyment. But let us go and try it, and see how far we will get.

I am sick and tired of feeding these new cars. In place of us telling how good Oregon is, let us start a new deal. Don't put up any one. We got plenty of camps for just that purpose. See how long they stay if they have to pay for what they get and wait on themselves.

I've got a big family, and this last week I only had 15 in-laws and would-be relatives look me up. Now I am wondering how I can pay the bills they all left me with, and they still have their $25.00-a-month cars and say: "Oh, my, we are somebody; we had such a good time, yes indeed"—while I and my family are the goats.

You print this, Mr. Editor, and I will have it framed and hung up in my yard.

Thank you.

A. N. BEALL,
 Klamath Falls.

MEDFORD, Aug. 28 (P)—John Newton Hockersmith, age 55 years, a survivor of an emigrant train that crossed the plains in 1853, and a resident of Jackson county for more than 70 years, died here yesterday. He engaged in the stock business for half a century in southern Oregon.

Hockersmith, at the age of four years, crossed the plains with his parents. The train was beset by hunger, disease, storms and Indians, one terrible experience being encountered at Meek's cut-off.

LAKEVIEW, Aug. 28 (P)—His chest crushed by a passing truck, Robert Wardlow was brought to

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

The Inside Story From The Capital
 By PAUL MALLON
 Copyright 1936, by Paul Mallon

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—The house of seventy babies, which is the state department, quivered as from an earthquake. A New York morning paper was carrying a story that President Roosevelt, if re-elected, might call an international peace conference. And, to make matters worse, the paper was the eternally reliable Times, whose word is accepted abroad as official gospel.

By 8 a. m., an unidentified authority in the department managed to let the world know anonymously that the idea was "utterly fantastic." By 10 a. m. word fell from on high that State Secretary Hull had never suggested such a thing to the White House and vice versa. By 1:15 p. m., sufficient compulsion was established to permit an official statement from Mr. Hull confirming the unofficial to a m. denial.

Now panics are nothing new in the state department. Diplomatic hearts are inherently flutters. But they never give way to terror before breakfast and only rarely before lunch. The cocktail hour is usually reserved for emotional strain.

What aspect the schedule this time was the fact that everyone knew or suspected the unprintable fact that the "utterly fantastic" idea came from no less an authority than the president himself, who was then riding west.

TRUE ROMANCE

There are many good reasons for believing that the president once, after dinner, with the past week, toyed out loud among friends with the post-election possibility of initiating a world peace move with Stalin, Hitler, Mussolini et al. The only way to do it would be on a personal man-to-man appeal. He had reached no conclusion. He was merely considering the possibility. He thought he might do it. If the situation six months from now developed encouraging prospects; and then again he might not.

In the meantime, there was certainly no domestic hazard involved in supposition. Like the prospect of no-tax-increase, the possibility was indefinite, but nevertheless, all water on the Roosevelt campaign wheel.

Internationally, however, it was different. Diplomatic frictions are such that the merest official suggestion carries dire thoughts. In the light of current bickering, the idea may be truly utterly fantastic. At least the tremendous diplomatic virtuoso thought so, and took the edge off another true romance.

TOURING

This drought trip upon which the president now is embarked will certainly appear to be non-political by comparison with his next one.

It has not yet been decided officially, but the last week in September he will start a swift swing around the western circle. He will go through the northwest, touch every Pacific coast state and return to concentrate in the middle west and east during the last two weeks of the campaign. His final campaign speeches will be in upper New York state, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Illinois.

Most of his advisers now agree the swing-trip is advisable, but he probably would go anyway.

STYLE

You may have noticed the scene at the president's first pause on his non-political drought trip. It was at Willard, Ohio, and it was only a pause, because the White House announced the first stop would be Bismarck, N. D. However, engines and train crews must change. The train paused for operating purposes. Mr. Roosevelt did also. He asked the crowd around the back platform how things were out there, and received the snappy response: "All right, since you have been in."

This is the new campaign style which causes admiring chuckles from all in his entourage. He used it first on his flood trip through Pennsylvania and New York a few weeks ago. He made no political talks, did no hand shaking, but at each town he would invariably appear and observe: "Things certainly look a lot different around here since I was last here in 1932," or, if he had not visited the community in 1932, he would ask the crowd how things were.

Those accompanying him thought this pointed psychology brought better results than speeches.

In Klamath

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif.—(Special to The Herald)—A contract has been let to the Utah Construction company for the construction of two sections of the Modoc Northern railroad, the line that is to connect the Cascade line of the Southern Pacific with the Overland line, and complete what is really the last link in the National cut-off.

This statement will meet with vigorous denial on the part of the Southern Pacific from the highest to the lowest, and will likewise be denied by the Utah Construction company. That is what happened when The Evening Herald published the exclusive story about the signing of the contract for the construction of the Black Butte cut-off from Grass Lake to Dietz.

But that contract had been signed just as this contract has been signed, as future events will prove.

Klamath's prohibition raiders struck again late yesterday afternoon, swiftly and unexpectedly, but not in Klamath Falls. Five officers quietly drove into Chiloquin between 4:00 and 5:00 p. m., raided three establishments, made four arrests, and returned to Klamath Falls with their prisoners.

News of Oregon

MILTON, Aug. 28 (P)—An earthquake, believed to be the most serious since the shock last July, sent Milton-Freewater citizens scurrying from their homes about 8:30 o'clock last night. No damage was done by the quake, which was also felt, though less severely, in Walla Walla.

MEDFORD, Aug. 28 (P)—When the state planning board meets here Friday it will have before it pleas for additional irrigation in the Rogue River valley.

W. A. Gates, chairman of the Jackson county chamber of commerce, said he would point out to the board that agricultural development in the valley is at a standstill because of lack of needed water.

PORTLAND, Aug. 28 (P)—Edward Fred, state director of the national emergency council, said the work of six federal agencies will be depicted in exhibitions at the state fair, September 7 to 13, at Salem.

Those represented will be the army engineers, works progress administration, public works administration, resettlement administration, housing administration and soil conservation service.

PORTLAND, Aug. 28 (P)—Oregon fire fighters were holding their breaths today as high temperatures and low humidity combined to create the season's most serious fire hazard. Heat records for the year went tumbling yesterday on the coast.

and in the Willamette valley. A bright sun and hot east wind shoved the mercury up to 94 at Cannon Beach, 93 at Eugene and 91 at Portland, all new high marks.

Medford boiled with a reading of 96, while at Pendleton the thermometer reached the comparatively cool point of 87.

At the request of State Forester Ferguson, Governor Martin closed the Mount Hood national forest and all the Fire Patrol association lands in Marion and Clackamas counties. Entry is by permit only.

GRANTS PASS, Aug. 28 (P)—Auto wreckers here are having strange customers these days. Last week one was called when a horse got stuck on a railroad trestle. Not to be outdone by a mere nag, a cow fell in Gilbert creek last night and again the call went out for a rescue car.

The car was unable to get close enough to haul bossy out, but a twist of the cow's tail ultimately did the trick.

PORTLAND, Aug. 28 (P)—Commissioner Beane's pay-as-you-go sewage disposal plan was placed on the ballot yesterday by the city council.

The plan, which calls for a 10-year construction program, to be financed by sewer user charges, involves an expenditure of about $5,000,000. Average cost to water users will be about 25 cents a month.

It was estimated that the new plan would cost about $4,000,000 less than the 25-year program adopted in 1933, calling for issuance of $6,000,000 worth of bonds.

OREGON CITY, Aug. 28 (P)—A coroner's jury returned a verdict of negligence on the part of Harland V. Litherland, of Portland, in the death of Samuel F. Parker, 84, in an automobile accident at Island City last Friday. No charges were filed.

The aged man, a resident of Milwaukee and a pioneer of Woodburn, was killed when crossing the super-highway.

ALBANY, Aug. 28 (P)—Albany college announced resignation of Dr. A. A. Groening, for six years head of the physical science department, and for the past five, dean of the college.

Dr. Groening accepted an offer to teach in the science department of Linfield college. His successor has not been chosen.

PORTLAND, Aug. 28 (P)—The question of whether a segregated vice district is being re-established in Portland came up for discussion at the community chest hearing yesterday.

Miss Martha Randall of the women's protective division denied that such was the case. She declared, however, that there was systematic promotion of the vice traffic by landlords and real estate operators.

"Any landlord is glad to have them because they pay more rent than other tenants, and aren't so fussy about the condition of the building," said Miss Randall.

 Miss Randall reported a marked decrease in juvenile and feminine delinquency and a much more orderly dance hall situation than previously. The latter development also credited to zealousness on the part of dance halls in guarding their beer licenses.

OREGON, Aug. 28 (P)—Spectators at the afternoon show of the Multnomah county fair yesterday missed an unscheduled bit of entertainment when a team of six big draft horses staged a runaway just after leaving the track.

Doc Bentley, driver, got the animals under control after a short struggle. It was northwestern Oregon's second runaway in a week, the other having occurred at the Oregon City territorial days' show.

ONTARIO, Aug. 28 (P)—J. D. Fairman of Ontario, John C. Modlin of Harper and Martin Joyce of Juntura have been named for three-year terms on Oregon Grazing district No. 3. Fairman will represent free range users, Modlin and Joyce stockmen.

BEND, Aug. 28 (P)—The Shelly-Hixon lumber yards were the scene of a spectacular accident yesterday, when 17 empty logging cars were derailed.

No one was injured in the accident, which occurred when the 40-car train struck a split switch. The cars were being taken back to the woods after dumping logs in the mill pond.

Several of the derailed cars crashed into a concrete building. The building stood up, however, and several large oil tanks perched on top of it remained standing.

ath Falls in point of service possibilities to their trade area, geographical location making for a natural wholesale center and opportunities for growth as a distribution center.

These cities are Spokane, Salt Lake City and Sacramento, all of which have more than 100,000 population. Klamath Falls, far younger than these cities, Mr. Davis asserted, has greater opportunities for growth than any of them and will be limited as to its future only by the vision of its leaders and the willingness of all its people to forget "Main street" and think and act in terms of the Midland Empire.

That is something to think about.

If Klamath Falls should reach in time a population of 100,000, it would be fine for this city. But that isn't all. It would be fine for the entire Klamath country.

A city of 100,000, located here, would provide vastly better marketing facilities for the entire Klamath country than now exist. If such a city should arise here, the value of ALL PROPERTY in the Klamath country would be greatly benefited.

If you doubt that, look at property values in the near vicinity of Spokane, Salt Lake City and Sacramento. The entire Klamath country has a stake in the building of a metropolitan city somewhere within its boundaries.
