

Picture Story of Pine Ridge Conflagration

Here is another house, going up in a sheet of flames.

This picture was taken by Rex Lindler, Algoma, shortly after the fire broke over the mill. The Southern Pacific house at the extreme left was one of the few spared by the terrifying conflagration.

Among homeless people after the fire was this group in a picture taken Saturday evening. In the picture are Mr. and Mrs. R. E. McDaniel and children of the McDaniel and Owen Buchanan families.

Here among their belongings, Pine Ridge residents talk over the conflagration that deprived them of homes and jobs.

This night shot shows a house which has just exploded into flame. Note, across the road, a bathtub yanked from the residence ahead of the flames.

Against a background of smoke and flame, household possessions of Pine Ridge residents are piled crazily in a field. At extreme left a woman is looking at a grand piano, hauled from the home of Manager A. T. McDonough. The house, after all, did not burn.

This automobile underwent a terrific scorching. Glass from the windows melted down and lay in the bottom of the car when spectators looked it over Sunday.
