MEMBER AUDIT BUREAU OF CIRCULATION

Weekend Roundup

PREPARATIONS were completed this week for the annual financial appeal of the Salvation Army. George W. McIntyre will direct the campaign in the coming week to raise $4200 for the budget of $5972.52 set up for the Salvation Army in the coming year. A group of public spirited citizens will assist Mr. McIntyre in canvassing the community for these contributions.

The cause is worthy, and those who give are sharing in an important humanitarian enterprise. The Salvation Army carries on here efficiently and quietly in behalf of the needy. It cannot continue this worth-while work without funds, and the quota set for the community is most conservative.

Adjutant Norman Bowyer has given us a few statistics which indicate the scope of the work of the army. In the past year hospitalization and a home for 1226 days were provided for unmarried mothers and babies from Klamath county in the Army's White Shield home. Garments, shoes, meals, lodgings and other services were given gratis to benefit 4655 persons. The officers spent 716 hours counselling and advising families in their homes and hospitals. The young people's club and other youth activities had an attendance of 3762.

Few of us realize the extent of the Salvation Army's community service in helping transient men and women and keeping them off the streets and away from back doors. Long ago the federal transient bureau ceased operation, but the flow of transients through here has continued and the Salvation Army has carried on.

The Army's work is by no means confined to transients, as the statistics above show. It is comprehensive and widely helpful to the unfortunate. It represents an opportunity for Klamath people to contribute to a voluntary charity. Those who are fortunate enough to be earning steadily and who possess a generous spirit will be happy to spare something for the Salvation Army if they fully understand the service it renders.

An interesting incident in connection with the fall charity and community service campaigns was the action taken the other day by high school faculty members. They voted unanimously to devote a small percentage of their salaries to a general fund from which disbursements will be made to a number of these campaigns. The faculty members in this way showed a spirit of cooperation with worthy community enterprises and spared campaign workers the necessity of solicitation among the teachers. It was an excellent idea.

Filing of manslaughter charges in a Lake county deer hunting accident follows a policy that has been widely recommended for coping with the annual rash of hunting fatalities. It opens the way for grand jury investigation of such accidents, and places emphasis upon the need for caution in hunting. A careless auto driver who causes a death on the highway is confronted with the possibility of involuntary manslaughter charges. There is no apparent reason why the same procedure should not be followed in case of suspected carelessness in the woods in deer season.

Tracks in the mud at Dairy show that a wild man, reported loose in that vicinity, stepped out, six feet at a stride, when flushed from cover. Looks like a likely recruit for a football team that needs a good running back.

If this business of football and the world series overlapping on a Saturday is a bit confusing to the sports fan, shed a tear for the poor guy who sits on a newspaper telegraph desk.

The Astrologer

William Dawson, resident of the Willard hotel, a teacher of astrology, is answering questions from The News and Herald subscribers concerning those born between 1880 and 1925. Questions should be addressed to Mr. Dawson at the Willard hotel, where he also can be reached by those interested in further information. No real names will be used in the published answers, and for that reason those asking questions should give an identification name.

Give the birth time, place of birth, and ask only one question. Be sure to give the correct name and address of the sender although this will not be used in the published item.

ANSWERS

JANE, Born Dec. 1, 1921, at 4 p. m. at Bonanza, Ore. Your progressed sun will come into conjunction with the birth time position of the moon during your 32nd year and your progressed moon will come into sextile with the birth time position of the sun during the same period. Jupiter the ruler of your house of marriage will also come into conjunction with Mars. Therefore all indications point to a marriage at the time designated.

BART, Born Jan. 3, 1895, at 8 a. m. at Tacoma, Wash. Your unhappiness is but a result of your lack of understanding with regard to that which constitutes happiness. Your idea of happiness is based upon the extent of your possessions and how you may acquire more without parting with those you have. Your childhood days were spent in a poverty stricken environment and this reflects upon your memory the hardships you experienced, consequently you have become obsessed with the belief that a penny saved is a dollar earned and a dollar spent is a dollar wasted. I could not advise you with regard to your health nor how you may become happy. The care of your health is a doctor's work, and becoming happy is dependent upon the mental attitude you encourage.

SELMA, Born Sept. 30, 1891, at Baker, Ore. Time not given. Saturn in Virgo and in discord with Jupiter tends toward imaginative diseases and gives to patent medicine vendors their best customers. You should not let yourself dwell upon sickness nor should you associate with those who love and hug their own diseases. If a reputable doctor tells you that he cannot find anything the matter with your health, believe him.

In 1907, 338,452 inhabitants of Austria-Hungary emigrated to the United States. This was the largest number of people to move from one country to another in a single year.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7 — This war is working out backwards in business as well as in fighting so far.

Instead of Britain trying to rush in and buy up all loose U. S. raw materials, State Secretary Hull has actually been trying to get Britain to let us have some from her. The British bought the entire Australian wool clip for this year immediately. Some of it usually is taken by the U. S. For the past week Hull and his men have been trying to arrange that we get our usual share. Likewise Britain has been making passes at the coarse carpet wool production of Argentina, of which we normally take a substantial percentage. Hull's agents are likewise trying to protect our buying market there.

TOBACCO HIT

That this is NOT a unique instance is illustrated by what has happened in our tobacco market. Britain did not dash in to lay up stocks for her soldiers, sailors and marines. She actually stopped buying in our market early in the middle of our marketing season, as soon as the war broke out. As she is our largest normal customer, the effect has been very harmful.

She has a 3 1/2 years supply on hand, which is somewhat but not greatly in excess of normal. Apparently she is trying to conserve foreign exchange for more necessary war materials later when and if congress repeals the embargo against planes particularly, as well as arms and munitions.

NOT GOOD FOR APPLES

In this instance, the proposal to repeal the embargo has apparently hurt rather than helped this primary export trade. Another less direct instance is fruit. Britain has licensed her fruit importers in such a way as to bar soft fruits (peaches, plums) and to threaten apples (for which she has been our best customer). It may have been done partly to conserve exchange, but there was on the sea has created hazards for transporting our fruits which may kill the export apple-growing industry in some eastern states entirely. Specially cooled boats are required and the delays caused by zig-zagging to avoid submarines and by waiting for convoys, may make fruit transportation unfeasible.

WHAT ABOUT COTTON

Someone also is going to be fooled on cotton. It is said the southern senators are eager for Mr. Roosevelt's program of arms embargo repeal, because (for one thing at least) they expect increased British demand for cotton as in previous years. There is a law against government officials predicting the price and demand for cotton, but you will find within the agriculture department if you look hard enough, an official report indicating the export market for American cotton is likely to diminish rather than increase, regardless of what congress does about the arms embargo. This official cotton survey indicates no market increase in price until next year's crop, based on increased domestic demand (due to better business) which is calculated to just about offset the decline in exports.

SECRET STORES

On top of all this the world wheat supply is the highest on record, 58 per cent larger than 1914, whereas consumption is only 30 per cent greater. Belligerents are supposed to have secret stores beyond these official figures. German and Italian stocks are reported sufficient to obviate any "difficulty in domestic needs there." World acreage next year is expected to be as large as this.

Small increasing export demand for livestock has been noticed, but prices declined after the first week of the war and heavy demand is not expected. Only foreign agents who have appeared in our commodity markets prominently since the war started are Russian, Italian, Swedish and Spanish, trying to buy rubber and coffee, presumably for Germany — the belligerent with whom no American foreign trade was expected.

The Family Doctor

BLOOD transfusion is today a fundamental method of treatment in practically every hospital.

More progress has been made in the use of blood for the control of disease during the last ten years than in all the previous history of this method. The first attempt to transfuse blood from one person to another was made several hundred years ago.

Many superstitions are attached to the idea. The British parliament in 1687 passed an act specifically prohibiting transferring of blood from animals to man. This was based on symbolic superstition, because it was felt that the person who receives blood from an animal would tend to develop some of the characteristics of the animal. Today we know that there is no possible mental effect brought about by the transferring of blood.

The modern story of blood transfusion really begins with the time when investigators showed that safety in the transferring of blood depends on getting blood that is compatible. This means that the blood of the donor will not coagulate or dissolve the blood cells of the person who receives the blood.

As soon as these limitations were established, more attention was given to developing technique for transferring blood. It was found that a chemical substance called sodium citrate would prevent blood from clotting.

This greatly simplified the problem so that today many syringes, two-way valves and similar devices are available for transferring blood from one person to another.

Nothing is gained by transferring blood from an animal into man and, in fact, the process itself is dangerous. There is, however, much to be gained by transferring the blood from one human being to another.

At first commercial organizations were set up to provide people who wanted to make a little extra money by giving blood. The price for a pint of blood varied from nothing at all in case the donor was charitably minded to as much as $50 to $100.

It soon became apparent that this was a poor system because there was no adequate control of the health of those who gave the blood. Bureaus began exploiting the donors, paying them certain amounts for giving their blood but getting the money back by charges for board, room and clothing.

In 1929 physicians in New York developed the Blood Transfusion Betterment association. Since that time a registry has been maintained for donors of blood.

Donors are examined physically. Studies are made to be certain they do not have syphilis and that the blood is in a satisfactory state for transfusion.

A standard price has been set in New York at about $35 a pint. After giving blood the donor must remain off the active list for a period of one week for every fifth

Telling The Editor

ABOUT WPA
KLAMATH FALLS (To the Editor)—Just what is wrong with the WPA in Klamath county? It looks as if WPA officials here were trying to see how much they could get away with.

I have in mind a case here in Klamath Falls of a WPA worker who applied for a job as carpenter on WPA and was accepted and told he would go to work about August 17. A few days before that date he was asked to take a date he was asked the assurance that it would pay the same as carpenter work. After working five days at a skilled rating he was cut intermediate which pays $2.50 per month less than this job has at any time before September 1 of this year and $18 per month less than the job he had been promised. This man at once asked for a transfer to carpenter work and at the time the transfer was requested there were openings for carpenters.

Although he repeatedly asked for a transfer he was stalled till there were no more openings for carpenters and then told that he could do no better than the job he is in. In other words he was forced to stay on a job he did not ask for or want but took because he was asked to do so.

This case is so very unjust that I feel that the people of Klamath Falls should know what is being done here on WPA.

The writer believes that WPA workers should be given every chance to better their conditions, and if possible get into something where they can make their own living, especially men who are too old to get work in private employment. I have checked carefully and am sure of my facts. I am told that this particular WPA worker felt that he might be able as a result of the better job get the tools to start a shop of his own and make a job for himself. How about it? Are WPA workers to be encouraged to help themselves or are they to be hindered?

STATE POLICE CUT PATROL FORCE HERE

The state police patrol in this district has been cut from ten to eight members. This necessitated reducing the Lakeview force from two to one, and the Klamath Falls force from eight to seven.

Transferred from the district are Harold Dawson, who goes to Medford, and Thayer Kessler, who goes to Coquille.

Walter Walker, formerly located at Klamath Falls but for five years at Lakeview, was transferred to Klamath Falls. Both points are in the local patrol.

The personnel of the state police force in the district is now as follows: Sergeant Louis Johnson, Officers J. W. Danforth, Mark Sullivan, J. W. Holcomb, T. B. Knapp, H. C. Nelson and Walter Walker, all of Klamath Falls; Hugo Leyva, Lakeview.

And Indian is not limited to one name all his life. His birth name is used until he wins a tribal name. This is given him by a chief, and he must accept it. However, he is given many chances to improve his standing, and each additional feat of bravery brings him a better name.

A religious zealot, Shabbatai Zebi, of Salonika, Greece, actually was married to the Bible. In 1650, The Bible was arrayed in bridal vestments and a priest performed the marriage ceremony with two official witnesses watching the ritual.

"I Have More Than a Good Tractor"

WRITES ONE "CATERPILLAR" OWNER

"MY 'CATERPILLAR' Diesel Tractor purchased in November, 1936, has operated over 5000 hours. This tractor does more work than the old gas tractor it replaced, and the fuel costs only 1/3 as much!

"Any piece of farm machinery needs a new part or the attention of a reliable serviceman at some time or other—especially working in abrasive soil such as we have here. The prompt service which I have received from Reed Tractor & Equipment Co. the few times I have needed it makes me feel I have MORE than just a good tractor.

"I believe the bellows seal is about the greatest single feature built into a tractor today. It certainly gives the final drive of my tractor real protection from dust and dirt."

YOU don't need parts or service for these machines very often, even under the toughest working conditions. But when you do, you can be sure we will take care of your needs quickly and accurately from a complete stock of genuine "Caterpillar" parts and a properly tooled Service Department.

This is just another one of the many advantages of owning a "Caterpillar" track-type Tractor. Come in and inspect our parts and service facilities.
