

MONTH QUIET FOR JUVENILE WORK, REPORT

The month of September was the quietest month of the year for the Klamath county juvenile worker, Phyllis Corbett, she set forth in a report presented to Circuit Judge Edward Bates Ashurst.

There were no juvenile cases serious enough to warrant court hearings, Miss Corbett reported, and several re-opened cases as well as new cases were cited in the statement.

Following is Miss Corbett's report of juvenile work in Klamath county:

Juveniles held in detention in county jail, 1; number of inmate days, 10; juveniles in accepted boarding homes in Klamath county, 16; transportation provided for juveniles outside of Klamath county, 1; under custody of state and state-aided institutions, 59; committed, 0; released during month, 2; on probation, 28; released, 1; on parole from state correctional institutions, 7; referred to child guidance clinic, 2; speeches, 2; new cases, 18; re-opened cases, 6.
