STORAGE DAMS PLANNED WHEN MONEY VOTED

DENVER, Nov. 13 (AP)—The reclamation bureau, builder of irrigation and water power projects, will be ready to offer semi-arid western states a new type of conservation project—hundreds of small storage dams—whenever Congress provides the money.

John C. Page, commissioner of reclamation, reminded the association of western states engineers, meeting here today on the eve of the national reclamation association's convention, that Congress in 1937 authorized the bureau to spend $500,000 on small dam projects, but had not yet made funds available.

The proposed program of small storage reservoirs, in regions where there is insufficient water for large-scale reclamation projects, would be "a contribution of great significance to the solidarity of the nation," the commissioner said in a prepared address.

Even if funds were available now, the $500,000 program "would not go very far toward filling the need which apparently exists" in large western states for small dams to cost from $500 to $50,000 each, Page told the engineers.

"As I view it, the program which has been authorized by the congress, when implemented by an appropriation, will serve principally as a demonstration in this new field."

The reclamation bureau already has obtained data on 276 proposed small dam projects and intends to ask the western states for more information when funds are appropriated.

"Certain areas, encompassing whole counties, in these big, dry states must forever remain largely undeveloped and sparsely populated," Page said in explanation of the program.

"This is a fact which is self-evident to anyone familiar with the geography and the rainfall pattern of the west. There simply is not sufficient water ever to make possible close settlement over vast territories.

"In these areas the grazing of livestock, where natural forage exists, will remain the principal agricultural pursuit. The irrigation of small patches of bottom lands along the creeks would make it possible for ranchers to establish homes, support schools for their children, and in such ways to assist in lightening the joints of these loosely connected states. This would be a contribution of great significance to the solidarity of the nation."

Page outlined plans for creating a "separate staff of well-qualified men to investigate, to plan, to negotiate repayment contracts for, and to construct" the small dams.

MOVING PLANNED ON MAIN STREET

The latter part of the year will see a major change in the face of Main street, one of the most important being the removal of Hardenbrook's, men's clothing store, from 833 Main street to the Riley building, 820 Main street, and the space now occupied is leased to Newberry's.

Byron Hardenbrook, owner of Hardenbrook's, announced the change of location this past weekend. The store will remain closed until Thursday morning at 10 o'clock when it will be opened for a removal sale.

The present location of Hardenbrook's which will be occupied January 1, 1940, by Newberry's is owned by O. R. Wayman of Portland.

Hardenbrook has occupied the present location of his store for the past four years. He announced Monday the new store would be opened January 1. The Riley building is now being completely renovated and prepared for one of the most modern, up-to-date men's shops in the city.

Newberry's will continue in its present location and will expand into the space now occupied by Hardenbrook.

RED CROSS WORKERS HEAR LOCAL PLANS

Workers in the 1939 Red Cross roll call gathered at the home of Mrs. George H. Merryman on Friday afternoon. John Ehinger, roll call chairman, spoke effectively on the aims and policies of the Red Cross and explained the set-up of the local drive. All quotas have been discarded, according to Ehinger, both nationally and locally, and every effort will be made to give every adult the opportunity to support the work of the Red Cross.

Mrs. S. D. Earhart, residential chairman, and Mrs. Louis Serruya, chairman of the business district, conferred with their captains and workers and issued instructions for the campaign.

Field workers also attended the kick-off luncheon at the Pelican cafe Monday noon with Ehinger presiding. Enthusiasm and good nature keyed the gathering and it was decided that the workers, when possible, would meet informally each noon to lunch together and to compare notes and ideas. Mrs. Serruya was in charge of arrangements.

"No Experiments for Me When My Child CATCHES COLD!"

NOTICE TO MOTHERS... Today 3 out of 5 mothers—knowing how foolish it is to experiment or constantly dose delicate stomachs—use this home-approved external poultice-vapor treatment to relieve distress of a cold.

WHEN a cold makes your child feel miserable, all stuffed up—causes muscular soreness or tightness, irritation in the upper bronchial tubes or spasms of coughing—let the experience of other mothers help you to relieve the distress.

Here's what you do: At bedtime, rub the child's throat, chest and back with Vicks VapoRub. And see what morning brings!

ACTS 2 WAYS AT ONCE... Almost immediately VapoRub starts stimulating like a good old-fashioned poultice. And, at the same time, pleasing—helpful—medicinal vapors are released by body heat and breathed direct into the cold-irritated air passages.

Then for hours this poultice-vapor action continues. It invites refreshing sleep. And when you see how it relieves distress you will understand why Vicks VapoRub is a family standby in 3 out of 5 homes. WHY TAKE NEEDLESS CHANCES!
