No Fair Peekin'

A whirl of parties greeted the New Year and, incidentally saw a very nice one leave. The girls and boys that go about socially said they'd never seen anything like the last two weeks of holiday time in all their born days. Subconsciously we think everyone is so awfully glad to live in America that they just had to celebrate.

Speaking of Christmas—the five-year-old and Gerry Igl have worked up a fine piece of business in the neighborhood. They've propositioned the neighbors to let them have next year's trees to sell. Right now there are a half-a-dozen in the garage they've collected and they are available cheap!

One thing about Clara Shaw having open house on two days everyone has so much fun they want to go both days and some people did.

These new pastel wools that are heralding spring with such enthusiasm in the city! Right here at home we noticed a charming young matron in pale pink wool and on her shoulder an orchid. Looked more delectable than anyone we saw over the holidays and that's going quite far in view of the fact the girls all turned out in their best bib 'n' tuckers.

At one of the numerous open house parties New Year's Day one of our substantial citizens was hovering around a very substantial table which groaned with caviar, prawns, ham, cheese and other good things. "Now remember, dear, we're going out to dinner in a few minutes!" cautioned the Little Woman. The substantial citizen backed away with a still friendly glance at the table.

We know a woman that, if you want to be her friend-for-ever, just send her a neat half dozen pickled prawns. Are good, aren't they?

At the Warren Hunt party for Doris and Robert Hunt, the attractive Doris wore white and made a perfectly lovely picture against the many, many white flowers used in the rooms.

Look at all the benefits ahead! The Library club Doernbecher party, the Lioness party for their pet hobby—sight conservation, the president's birthday ball on January the twenty-seventh, and something for the Finnish relief fund, just what hasn't been decided.

We're on the Finnish Relief committee. And to make a little money how about a wrestling match between a Finn and a Russian! You probably heard the one about tearing down the Russian building at the NY world-fair? Suggested they get a Finn to walk by and the building would just collapse.

Wish we could ski like those Finns!

A number of Christmas mingles with these for the individual dinner tables burned tall red tapers encircled by evergreen and bayberry. Centering the buffet table was a brass bowl of holiday greens and tapers in brass candelabras.

Games were played until the hour of midnight when 1940 was noisily ushered in, then the guests gathered about the piano for an "Auld Lang Syne" hour with old songs.
