Let's Get Behind This

THE annual effort to raise funds for the nationwide fight against infantile paralysis is now receiving the attention of Klamath people. January 27 at the armory are the time and place for the President's Birthday Ball, and the "March of Dimes" campaign is already underway.

Again illustrating the non-partisan aspects of this effort, Sam P. Miller, a republican, has been named chairman of the birthday ball committee. Mr. Miller capably handled this work a year ago, and a successful campaign this year is anticipated by him and his hard-working committee.

The cause is one of universal appeal. Infantile paralysis is the most feared disease in America. It is no respecter of persons. It strikes the rich and the poor, the child and the adult. It spreads sometimes in epidemic proportions, and sometimes it attacks in isolated cases.

The money raised through the birthday balls throughout the nation is used entirely for prevention and cure of infantile paralysis. Part of it goes to the Warm Springs foundation for research work that may ultimately prove of enormous benefit. Part of it remains in local communities for the aid of local cases.

This community has never failed to respond generously to the appeal for the birthday ball and the "March of Dimes." It is not expected to fail this year. If those who have helped before will help again, and others will come in, the funds raised for this most worthy purpose will be the largest on record here. That should be the objective.

Political Coverage

NOW comes the period of political announcements and other political news. State Senator U. S. Balentine's statement that he will seek re-election, received at the editorial desk Friday, starts the parade.

This newspaper will follow its customary policy of absolute fairness to all candidates in the handling of these announcements and other political news developments as they come along.

Each candidate is invited to submit for free publication an announcement statement, giving his personal history, his record, his campaign platform or any other information which he believes to be pertinent and newsworthy. It is suggested that these articles be confined to a length of about 500 words, to insure their readability and their convenient use.

As the campaign develops, other political news will be carried, and there will no doubt be editorial comment on candidates and issues. Politics is inherently controversial, and it is difficult at times to tell where newsworthy matter ends and political advertising begins. We will try, however, to cover pertinent developments, and there will be opportunity afforded to all candidates to comment when they feel that something said in the news or editorial columns about them justifies remarks.

These newspapers have a record of fairness in news treatment of political campaigns, including those in which they have actively participated, and they intend to maintain that record through the months ahead.

The Family Doctor

By DR. MORRIS FISHER, Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

The doctor of a previous generation always looked first at the tongue, because he considered it one of the most important organs in diagnosing constitutional diseases. It is now generally established that a tongue that is dry, dark and furred indicates disease; the tongue that is moist and clean reflects improvement.

We know that the manner in which the tongue protrudes from the mouth may be significant. A tongue that is in a healthy condition can be moved quickly or slowly in all directions, put out straight in the middle line and maintained there and pulled back without trouble.

Nervous people, those with over-activity of the thyroid gland, tend to move the tongue quickly and snappily; those who are dull are likely to have sluggish tongue movements. People who are weak or exhausted or in a slightly stuporous condition will put the tongue out just a little and leave it out until they are told to pull it back.

In paralysis that affects only one side of the tongue, muscles on the healthy side will push the tongue out and over to the paralyzed side. This sign is seen especially in people who have had a brain hemorrhage or who have lost the function of one side of the brain from some other cause.

The sense of taste is either abolished or abnormally acute in various forms of mental disturbance or of paralysis of certain nerves. People who have paralysis agitans or other forms of nervous disease may have tongues that are exceedingly tremulous when protruded from the mouth. This sign is also seen frequently in people who have overindulged in alcohol.

The most common coating on the tongue is a sort of a white fur that is usually associated with a run-down condition. Sometimes, it reflects digestive disturbances. A dry tongue may be due to a person having kept his mouth open steadily because of difficulty in breathing through the nose.

Spots on the tongue may be the result of little hemorrhages, of small infections, of ulcers, or of bruises.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12—The Russians are reported on the inside here to be moving up heavy artillery to clean out the Mannerheim line.

The line is not an entrenched position to the same complete degree as the Siegfried line and west wall. While it has become known as a line, it is merely an arrangement of extemporized trenches, anti-tank devices, and machine gun nests. Accurate shelling could clean it out fast. There are no subterranean passages as on the western front.

Consequently, authorities here would not be surprised to hear of an early conclusion of the Russian offensive. The reds have the guns, these have now been moved into place, and the only question is whether the aim of the generals is as cockeyed as their political doctrines.

MORE BEHIND IT

The story being told here is that Hore-Bellaha's resignation from the British cabinet was forced by an inside fight over handling the British air force. The air arm of the British forces in France is now under the army generals. Before the minister's resignation it was an independent force.

The generals had a fairly good case against him because few military authorities believe airplanes can function as an individual unit apart from general army and navy purposes.

However, this seems a rather flimsy cause for the abandonment of an inspiring British leader. Officials here think there is something more behind it but they do not know what.

Notes: Only change in conduct of the war expected here as a result of the shakeup is further concentrated control over the British air force in France by the generals.

HOME MORALE

If you read Premier Chamberlain's speech, you wasted your time. It was intended primarily to bolster domestic morale. There is not the slightest chance of a land attack unless Hitler starts scratching his vest like Napoleon and overrules his army general staff.

Morale in England is reported fairly good considering this enlightened day of independent thinking, but it is not so good that the government can avoid consideration of the subject.

Continuation of efforts to buoy the spirits of the British populace is to be expected from now on.

QUIET

Enthusiasm has seldom been less noticeable in a session of congress. The leaders are going about the business of correcting technical defects, such as the TNEC investigation of insurance companies, the Harrison movement to provide a system of independent congressional investigation of budget claims, the well worn anti-lynching bill which always passes the house and never passes the senate, etc.

The generally approved tendency of congress is to let anything important slide until after the elections.

NEW TONE

The utter lack of comment in congress concerning the president's Jackson day speech is an illustration of the new tone. Even the republicans refrained from anything more than perfunctory criticism.

The presidential challenge which Senator Taft answered with a detailed analysis of how the budget could be balanced has likewise failed to interest the legislative politicians.

Prevailing opinion there seems to favor independent budget making and legislative action in a minor technical way without regard for the president's advice.

Latest Swim Suit Creation For Women Resembles Corset

NEW YORK, Jan. 12 (AP)—Women (what won't they think of next?) will do a lot of swimming this summer in the closest thing to a corset you ever saw.

The creation, called a "swim suit" but not in any respect resembling the conventional midly blouse and bloomers, was displayed "to the trade" on four blondes and two brunettes. One of the latter also wore a red hair-ribbon.

"No more need the fastidious lady wear a rubber girdle under her bathing suit," explained one of the hired help. "We've combined the works in a thing of beauty."

What they've actually done is woven tough rubber into the cloth so that the suits will stretch in one direction and not in the other.

Fifty keen-eyed experts, seated at tables in a Fifth avenue atelier, tried to look blasé while the models paraded among them on wooden clogs.

A sales manager asserted: "These suits are designed so that the feminine form is accentuated along the most flattering lines with the contour of the body gracefully feminine." He pointed out what he meant. He was right.

One of the observers, commenting on a sleek white suit, opined: "There is a little more to this than meets the eye—but not much." He seemed pleased.

Four or five blue suits attracted the most attention. They were worn by a blonde. She was 5 feet, 4 inches high; weight 105; color of eyes, blue; hair, curly. She also could have appeared in an ulster, with earmuffs and galoshes, and still have attracted attention.

One of the suits she wore was the color of a tropic night, studied with stars. Closer examination disclosed the stars actually were the blonde herself showing through eyelid embroidery.

"Indeed it is not embarrassing," she said. "It makes life more interesting."

One of the brunettes displayed a pink suit. She wore earrings.

Some of the observers were intrigued by the discovery that slide fasteners have replaced the hook-and-eye. The slide fasteners lock.

Some of the women present said they especially liked one little number described as a "princess with swing skirt" and separate trunks. It was a black satin and a knockout.

It looks like a good year for a seashore vacation.

Cold Wave Hits Berlin; Supply Of Fuel Wanes

BERLIN, Jan. 12 (UP)—A war shortage of coal and a severe cold wave hit Berlin today, resulting in the death of one person and extreme discomfort for thousands.

The official ration of coal is 50 small bricks for each household per week, but many persons had been unable to get their allotment before the supply was exhausted.

Supplies of coal have been falling proportionately with the temperature. Canal boats which deliver a large proportion of the capital's fuel are frozen in ports of origin or ice-bound along the way.

A man about 65 was found frozen to death on the street today, the first reported victim of a cold wave in 11 years. The mercury dropped to 21 degrees below zero centigrade (about 4 degrees below zero Fahrenheit) in the capital and to 24 below in the suburbs.

Hundreds of workers were clearing a heavy snowfall from the principal streets.

Weather

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA: Generally fair tonight and Saturday but unsettled in extreme south portion and over mountains, cooler tonight with local frosts except cloudy and unsettled tonight followed by morning fog extreme south portion; fresh northwest wind off the coast.

WASHINGTON AND OREGON: Unsettled tonight and Saturday with temperature generally below normal; local snows in mountains; considerable valley fog tonight; moderate northerly wind off the coast.

Police Hold Pair In Fatal Stabbing

YAKIMA, Wash., Jan. 12 (UP)—A hotel operator and his negro employee were held last night while police investigated the fatal stabbing of William Murphy, 24, son of a former Yakima county sheriff who now lives at Oroville, Cal.

Police said witnesses to an altercation in a cafe here last Tuesday night had signed statements asserting James Isom, 31, had hired Murphy to "beat up" James Carey, 35-year-old negro after a quarrel between the two men.

Murphy was stabbed in the resulting fight and died at a hospital today. Prosecutor Lloyd Wiehl said second degree murder

TULELAKE AND BUTTE VALLEY MERGE SPORTS

TULELAKE (Special)—A meeting of the incorporators of the Tulelake-Butte Valley Sportsmen's association met Sunday and heard a report from C. F. Eschwig on the filing of papers at Sacramento and recording them at Yreka.

It was voted to turn the assets of the old association over to the new association, which will be known as the Tulelake-Butte Valley Sportsmen's Association, Incorporated.

George Smith, secretary, resigned owing to his leaving Tulelake, and Charles Coates was elected in his stead. Other officers will fill their positions until the annual meeting June 30.

A meeting of the board of directors will be held Wednesday evening, January 17, in Legion hall, to which anyone interested can come.

Announcement was made that the traps at the peninsula will be open Sunday, January 21.

Telling The Editor

Opposes Parking Meters

KLAMATH FALLS, Ore. (To the Editor)—Why may I ask, you and all the rest of the city and county taxpayers, has the man from Chiloquin any right to advise the city to put in parking meters so he and others outside the city shoppers can get a parking place when they come to Klamath Falls to do a little shopping. We, the taxpayers, put up with our parking conditions 365 days a year. So why can't our outside guests put up with one day out of every three or six months or so. We, the taxpayers, have paid and paid well for the privilege of parking on our city streets, so why should the city collect any more from us just so Chiloquin and other residents can get a parking place once a month. If they don't like our parking conditions let them stay at home and concentrate on the development of their own run-down conditions.

Maybe I or any one of us should not say such as I have just said, due to the fact that we drive away outside shoppers and income. But I surely believe we have as much right to this as our Honorable Judge Ashurst who tried to drive away one of the city's biggest outside incomes, the loggers and woodsmen. They come to town once a week and spend the biggest share of their money here. They didn't kick about the parking or the town. So why should Chiloquin kick?

We don't need parking meters. What we do need, though, is about half the town moved off Main street and traffic lights the full length of Main street. Why in the name that's holy, did the city put traffic lights at the underpass instead of on Main street where the traffic is so congested.

Now, if there is any kicking to do, Chiloquin and the rest of you outsiders let the people and taxpayers of Klamath Falls do it.

MRS. D. MCKENNEY.

Editor's Note:

The city did not put the traffic lights on the underpass. They were placed there by the state highway commission and financed by the federal government. The city has no available money for traffic lights on Main street. That must be provided, if at all, by a levy or bond issue.

WOMAN CHARGES MOTHER-IN-LAW WITH ASSAULT

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 12 (UP)—Mrs. Ralph Lovee, wife of a Vallejo department store owner, Wednesday filed a $250,000 damage suit against her husband's stepmother, charging slander and assault.

The suit filed in superior court accused Mrs. S. M. Lovee of knocking the plaintiff unconscious at an encounter in the Mark Hopkins hotel dining room here on New Year's eve.

The suit involves one of Vallejo's most wealthy and prominent families.

Mrs. Elsie Lovee's complaint accused her stepmother-in-law, Mrs. Marie Lovee, of:

"Assaulting the plaintiff by striking her on the head with a heavy object, knocking her unconscious, kicking her, placing a burning cigarette against her body and severely burning her body; insulting and slandering the plaintiff by calling her obscene names in the presence of a third person; said insults being false, defamatory and exposing the plaintiff to ridicule."

MISSIONARY TELLS OF AFRICAN TRIP IN KIWANIS TALK

A trip across Africa was described to members of the Kiwanis club Thursday by Ernest Moser, missionary of the Presbyterian church and former resident of Klamath Falls. Mrs. Moser (Edna Dunbar) is a member of a well known pioneer family of Klamath Falls.

Moser concluded his talk with a statement that his observations on all his travels convinced him more strongly than ever of the destructibility of Christianity.

Percy Murray introduced the speaker. Oren Fraley was chairman of the day. President Ted Medford announced committee appointments for the new year.

WATER, WATER EVERYWHERE—BUT NOT IN LAKEVIEW

LAKEVIEW, Jan. 12 (UP)—Under threat of getting nothing but a tantalizing glimpse from their faucets, Lakeview's delinquent water customers are paying up in a hurry. Manager Fred Fisher triumphantly reported last night.

It was Fisher's idea to put catches on water meters of tardy bill payers, permitting only a dribble from the faucets. But it seems the customers want no part of a scheme which necessitates waiting five to 10 minutes for a drink or of starting to run Saturday night's bath some time in the middle of the week.

Manager Fisher's only problem now is what to do with the gadgets ordered to equip meters with dripping facilities. However, he said he thinks maybe their presence in the warehouse is the best collection insurance he can get.
