Weekend Roundup

GOOD ROAD—The road to Lakeview is in the best condition it has ever been, according to persons who have recently traveled it. A contractor is at work on the short cut-off at Dairy, and another is moving equipment after having completed the Davis creek section. One time a major problem for Klamath and Lake county communities, the Lakeview highway is becoming increasingly satisfactory for travel. There is still work to be done, but it appears certain to come in the near future. When the Klamath and Lake county chamber of commerce officials hold their annual get-together at Lakeview in a few weeks, there will be ample reason for rejoicing over the situation on the road that connects these two teeming communities.

McNARY—The name of Senator Charles L. McNary will be entered on the Oregon primary ballot for the republican nomination for president. The canny Oregonian, veteran of more than 20 years in the senate and minority leader of that body, is good presidential timber. He is a shrewd politician who will know when to release his votes if such action appears desirable. He is also being discussed as a possible vice-presidential candidate. McNary's name on a party ticket will lend it prestige and strength.

HEARING—Several who did not attend the national labor relations board hearing here this week have inquired about the conduct of the hearing. No doubt they have in mind criticisms that have been made of the NLRB hearings for several years. It is possible the fact the NLRB is undergoing a searching investigation in Washington has something to do with it, but the hearing here was conducted in a fair manner with board officers appearing, at least, to be strictly neutral. That has not always been the case, as the current investigation at Washington has brought out. The nature of the case on which the hearing was held here had something to do with it. It might be different if some one were being accused.

WOMAN TREASURES ANCIENT GARMENTS reads a headline in our favorite newspaper. Exceptional, indeed.

And then there was the politician who was so sure he could win any one of several offices he couldn't make up his mind which to run for. But he didn't live here.

The Family Doctor

(This is the sixth in a series of 11 articles by Dr. Morris Fishbein on Magic Medical Bullets.)

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
 Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine.

IN the reign of the Emperor Hadrian, about 300 A. D., there lived a Greek physician, named Aretaeus, who recognized the disease which today we call diabetes.

Despite his fundamental observations, more than 1300 years passed before much definite information, regarding diabetes, was acquired. Then an English doctor, named Willis, found that the waste matter in diabetes is sweeter than the normal, and another 100 years passed before another doctor showed that the sweetness was due to sugar. Now scientific medicine began to understand the character of this disease.

Then German investigators found out that removal from the body of a dog of a gland called the pancreas is followed by the development of diabetes. Still later, another investigator showed that it is not particularly the pancreas, but certain glands in the pancreas known as the islets of Langerhans which are primarily responsible for the disposition of sugar by the body.

Eventually, Canadian investigators, named Banting and Macleod, with their assistants Best and Collip, received the Nobel prize in medicine for proving that an extract can be made from these glands in the pancreas and that this extract, when taken into the body, will substitute for the secretion which the pancreas would ordinarily pour into the blood. This enables the blood to take care of the sugar in the diet.

This substitute for the secretion of the pancreas is called insulin. Among the Magic Medical Bullets known to modern medicine, insulin stands very high. Before the discovery of insulin, diabetes in childhood was practically an uncontrollable and fatal disease. Today, children with diabetes can be promised long lives of usefulness. Moreover, adults who develop diabetes nowadays live much longer than did people who developed diabetes in earlier generations.

But the battle against diabetes did not stop with the discovery of insulin. New modifications have appeared, including protamine zinc insulin and more recently crystalline insulin, both of which are vast improvements over the original products.

It may soon become possible for the diabetic to take fewer injections to obtain the desired effect. It is also possible that as we learn more about sugar metabolism in the human body, means will be developed for still further increasing the length of life of the diabetic.

NEXT: Arsenamine for syphilis.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10 — A dim outline of the peace program taking form in President Roosevelt's mind appears to have been offered unostentatiously by his number 1 brain trust, Professor A. A. Berle, in a recent Yale address. Copies are now at a premium here as the tip has gone around that Berle's peace vision in the basis of the plan Myron Taylor, presidential emissary, is carrying to Rome. Mr. Berle, the assistant secretary of state, is known to have worked on the Taylor agenda for the president.

The Berle working theory is that while the United States has kept out of the war, it cannot keep out of the peace. No matter how fantastic it sounds, he says, the United States will come to the proposition that it must underwrite the financial, monetary and economic restoration of Europe—or else our own classic economic system would have to be revised.

If we would sell anything to post-war devastated Europe we must, according to Berle, use our huge gold stock through loans to reestablish European currencies. The advanced Roosevelt thinker admits such philanthropic benevolence seems fairly-tailor now, but he contends there will be no other way in which to safeguard our own economic structure.

NEW FORMS

Upstages of revolution will no doubt appear in war-torn regions to promote new untried formulas of government, he thinks. . . . The need of Europe for food will be as great as its financial needs, and we have surplus foods too. . . . Revision of tariff barriers and trade freedom between nations will be necessary. . . . International pools for transportation and finance will have to be formed. For all these reasons, the administration is coming to the view the United States will have to save Europe to save itself.

PEACE PRICE

Inner Franco-British discussions of what kind of victorious peace they want do not contemplate chopping Germany into small pieces, as widely reported. Basis of the allied purpose, as the best informed here have learned it, is that the German border be moved back only to the Rhine. Both Holland and Belgium would profit as well as France. Restoration of Poland and Austria, and perhaps Finland is part of the plan.

No further punitive suggestions have reached the ears of our authorities who believe such is unlikely in view of the failure of the last oppressive peace.

VALENTINE HINTS OFFERED BY AGENT

At one time Valentine celebrations were almost as important as Christmas and New Years. Many people still celebrate the day by sending Valentines or giving parties. Free leaflets giving suggestions for Valentine programs and parties are available at the office of Mrs. Winnifred Gillen, county home demonstration agent, 208 Federal building. Ideas for invitations, games, decorations, and refreshments are given in these leaflets as well as poems, tableaux and short play, "In a Valentine Box."

MAC KHERD RATES HIGH IN TESTING

Report of Tom Fitzgerald, tester of the Klamath Dairy Herd Improvement association, just received at the county agent's office, shows a total of 215 cows in the association during January, with an average production of 560 pounds of milk and 33 pounds of butterfat. As usual, Earl Mack, Spring Lake dairyman, had the high herd, with herd average of 41.6 pounds butterfat. In addition, Mack had the high cow, a grade Jersey producing 1330 pounds milk and 77.1 pounds butterfat. Second high cow also was owned by Mack, giving 1513 pounds milk and 71.1 pounds butterfat.

In addition, Mack had 21 cows make the roll of honor by completing a 305-day record of over 325 pounds butterfat for cows three years of age, 350 pounds butterfat for cows three to four years of age, 375 pounds fat for cows four to five years of age, and 400 pounds or over for cows five years and over. Following is the list of completions:

Name of Cow	Age	Days in Milk	Pounds Milk	Pounds Butterfat
Babe	4	270	6273	406.8
Blossom	6	305	8305	447.4
Cherry	4	269	8368	484.3
Gretel	5	267	11994	540.6
Kay	4	276	9177	513.3
Pansy	6	305	9208	527.9
Red	8	305	7148	446.8
Sally	6	305	7417	406.1
Brindle	3	305	7973	474.2
Myrtle	3	304	7449	426.4
Blackie	2	305	6690	373.1
Dot	2	296	7684	419.4
Lena	2	305	6470	323.3
Linda	2	304	5991	382.8
Polly	2	305	8562	417.2
Schwartz	2	227	9054	390.7
Spot	2	303	8442	415.1
Stella	2	221	6302	377.7

This is an exceptionally fine record, and compares favorably with any herd in Oregon.

Potato Sorter Injured When Timber Falls

TULELAKE (Special) — Harry Heddington, 50, was injured Friday in an accident in a potato cellar on the M. F. Edwards farm near here. Heddington was helping sort potatoes, when a timber from one of the bins fell on him, striking the side of his head. He suffered shock and concussion, and was taken to the Klamath Valley hospital.

INDUSTRIAL UNION PROTESTS NLRB ACT

TOLEDO, Feb. 10 (AP)—The Industrial Employees union of the C. D. Johnson Lumber company formally protested its disestablishment in a telegram yesterday to a house committee investigating the national labor relations board.

The protest stated that "compliance with the board's order will deprive us of free choice of union as guaranteed under the Wagner act." The local claimed a huge majority at the plant.

LEU locals at the McGoldrick Lumber company of Spokane and the Potlatch forests of Lewiston, Idaho, were also affected by the order.

REVISION SOUGHT FOR LIQUOR LAW

ASTORIA, Feb. 10 (AP)—Initiative petitions asking substitution of a more liberal law for the present state liquor control act were filed with the Clatsop county clerk yesterday. They were presented by Common Sense, Inc., Portland, and contained about 845 names. They proposed re-creation of the liquor board, a new type of liquor licensing and consumption on and off the premises of a liquor dispensary.

Camp Fire News

The Wake Camp Fire Girls whose leader is Mrs. L. A. French, have had a busy week. They started plans for earning the 1940 birthday honor with a meeting at Camp Fire house Thursday. Early Saturday morning they visited the city police department. The police matron escorted them through the women's quarters of the jail, and they were also shown how prisoners are "booked." The police radio was demonstrated and they were told how it is an asset in capturing criminals. From the police department the girls and Guardian French went to the Lost River dairy. Here they were shown the various processes in the handling of milk, the regulations governing its sale, and the precautions that are taken by the dairy to insure cleanliness.

Caule girls held a Valentine party and dinner at the home of their guardian, Louise Kirk, Friday evening. The dinner was a fulfillment of one of the requirements for Trail Seekers and the following girls planned, prepared and served: Eileen and Connie Ridgeway, Barbara Black, Phyllis Turner, Norma and Emma Baker, Margaret Blair, Shirley Robinson and Margie Paimerton.

The O. d. k. e. s. who are all working on Trail Seeker rank, elected the following officers for 1940: president, Blake Griffe; treasurer, Marietta Hanson; secretary, Mary Cox and scribe, Patricia Harrington. Odako sponsor is Mrs. Bruce Hull.

The Winemas have another new member, Evelyn Hanson. These girls have a busy month planned which includes a nature hike, a game meeting, a sing fest and an outdoor dinner for rank requirement.

Zonta Camp Fire girls elected new officers January 23, 1940. The new officers are as follows: president, Marion Mathews; vice president, Jean Hilton; secretary, Joanne Bennett; treasurer, Patricia Moncrief; scribe, Vivian Ferguson.

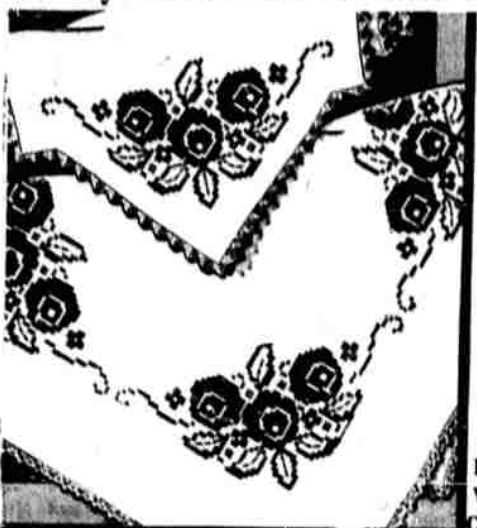

The girls decided on a candy sale and sold candy Friday, January 26, at the Pelican theater. They received $7.61.

February 13, 1940, the day before Valentine day, our sponsor, Mrs. Vance Vaupel is having a group dinner planned, prepared and served by the girls. We assigned committees which are as follows: table decorations, Ramona Reeves, June Earhart, Nancy Humble and Jean Hilton; main course, Alice Mead, Patricia Moncrief, Joanne Bennett, Janet Welch, Tawana or Mrs. Palmerton, Evelyn Moore and Marion Mathews; salad, Norma Smith, Vivian Ferguson, Beverly Courtney and Dorothy Haway; dessert, Ruth Landay, Vance Vaupel and Alice Eastman.

The first name mentioned in each committee is responsible. Vivian Ferguson, Zonta scribe. The girls of the Chiloquin Camp Fire group earned $30 through their Christmas project. There are 16 girls in this group and they plan to earn enough money by June to pay their expenses at Camp Ka-ueta this summer.

The Oakes Blue Birds of Shasta View school have chosen embroidery as their spring project. They plan to design and complete an article for Mother's day. While they sew they tell stories and riddles. This group is having a Valentine party in
