

GERMANS DRAW ENVOYS FROM POLAND AREAS

WASHINGTON, March 21 (AP)—American citizens in German-occupied areas of Poland were deprived of direct diplomatic protection today when German authorities ordered all foreign envoys to quit the area, effective at midnight, Polish time.

The order was revealed by the state department which said it already had lodged a protest and added "this government has reserved all its rights in the matter."

As of Dec. 31, the state department listed 532 Americans in Poland, most of them in the German-occupied sector.

The state department announcement said:

"The German government decided some time ago to evacuate the members of the diplomatic and consular establishments of all foreign governments in occupied Poland. The German government fixed the 20th of this month as the date of their departure. In this connection, the members of the American consulate general in Warsaw were requested to leave Poland. The department understands they are leaving today for Berlin, where they will report to the American embassy."

"Representations were made to the German government through the American embassy in Berlin stressing the difficulty of rendering assistance and protection to American citizens without consular representation in Warsaw."

"The German government, however, took the position that all foreign diplomatic and consular officers must withdraw. Consequently, all matters in connection with American citizens now in Poland will be handled for the present through the American embassy in Berlin."

Rotary Speaker Says Finish War Is Chamberlain's Aim

SALEM, Ore., March 21 (UP) Virgil Pinkley, European business manager of United Press, told the Salem Rotary club Wednesday that Neville Chamberlain, more than any other British statesman, was determined to carry the war with Germany to a "knockout finish."

Formerly manager of the Salem bureau, Pinkley came here today from Los Angeles, where he has been on vacation. He was to go to Portland tomorrow for two addresses.

Speaking on his first-hand impressions of European conditions, gained through yearly continental trips covering thirty to forty thousand miles, Pinkley listed among his conclusions:

Yard cleaning, getting flower beds ready and setting of shrubbery are the order of the day here now.

The Hess boys and Kohler boys had a grand time dragging the road Monday evening and filling up the ruts.

The Kohlers are plowing their ground for wheat.

That the outcome of the war apparently depends on two factors—effectiveness of the allied blockade to starve Germany, or effectiveness of a German "air blitzkrieg" against England.

That any likely offensive move by Germany probably will center in Belgium and Luxembourg, as a step in establishment of airdromes for bombing England.

That neither France nor England will stop fighting until the war is fought to its conclusion.

That Germans show a marked hate for their opponents, while French and English have no apparent hate for the Germans.

That there will be no effort by the German high command to take Paris, but instead a concentration on the separate defeat of England, with the French to be dealt with later.

Lindbergh would have an international conference, with delegates holding as much power as their armies would hold relatively in the field. Conferees from the larger countries could bring two sawed-off shotguns instead of one.
