

4-H AGENT HAS APPRECIATION FOR FAIR WORK

The 4-H spring fair is over and looking back over the activities this year Clifford Jenkins, county club agent, reported the largest fair, with the largest attendance, the most exhibits and more committees functioning than ever before. Jenkins wished to express his appreciation to the many volunteer leaders and committeemen who were responsible for putting over the 1940 fair.

The carnival held this year under the direction of Carroll Howe was very successful. When all accounts are settled this event will have cleared about $80 or $90 with which to buy summer camp equipment, it was learned. The candy stand was handled by the Fairhaven school under the direction of Wilbur Robinette; the refreshment stand was handled by Chiloquin school under the guidance of E. E. Evans and Loy Barker; the fish pond sponsored by Summers school and Arthur Millard. The bean shooter game was sponsored by Keno school under the direction of C. C. Chase, and Malin handled the country store and merchandise was contributed by Riverside, Pelican, Fremont and Mills schools. The fortune telling booth was also handled by Riverside school. The movie was presented by Altamont school under the direction of A. C. Olson.

The track meet, going on in record breaking time by Roland Parks and his staff of able assistants, was the first track meet to be pushed through on schedule. This was largely due to the announcing by Loy Barker and the use of the sound truck which was loaned by Fluhrer's bakery. The first year that the track meet was held in conjunction with the spring fair, Chiloquin took the school trophy. The next year, Malin took the trophy, and last year and this year, Henley contestants piled up the most points that won them the cup. Success of the Rotary 4-H dinner on Friday night, April 26, is due largely to the contributions of food made by the following: beef by the 4-H livestock club leaders; potatoes by Rex High, president of the 4-H club council; butter by Lee Holliday and Orth Campbell; ice cream by Allen's dairy at Chiloquin; milk by the Walker dairy of Merrill; apples for the salad by Boito's. The cakes were baked by individual club members.

Total scholarships furnished by the Klamath county fair board included seven to the Oregon state fair, 28 to summer school at Corvallis, 84 to 4-H summer camp at Lake of the Woods, and 35 half-scholarships to summer camp.

There's something sour somewhere when the report comes out that no sugar legislation will be required at this session of congress. Imagine finding anything not requiring legislation.

BUDGET PROGRAM CITED BY DAWES

WASHINGTON, May 1 (UP)—Charles G. Dawes, former vice president and first director of the federal budget, last night laid down a comprehensive four-point plan which he said "the next president might adopt to balance the budget."

"Mistake not," he told the chamber of commerce of the United States, "the budget of the United States can be balanced. If the next president is a fighter and will, without qualification, pledge himself in his conscience and before his people—and before congress—to go to fight for a balanced budget, he should not fail. But he must be made of stern stuff."

He said the plan he recommends "is simply that actually carried out successfully" by President Harding in 1921.

"The next president," he said, "if he is to save the nation from bankruptcy and its people from ruin, must make the old fight over again and his battle will be waged under desperate disadvantages. Against him will be arrayed the largest, strongest and most formidably entrenched army of interested government spenders, wasters and patronage-dispensing politicians which the world has known."

ALL ABOUT BABIES

By RICHARD ARTHUR BOLT, M. D., DR. P. H. Secretary, Maternal and Child Health Section of American Public Health Association

HEALTH is a delicate balance between many conflicting forces. A healthy balance of body and mind must be maintained by constant adjustments between the individual and his surroundings. His ability to make these adjustments depends upon his heredity, his intelligence, his training in health habits, his resistance to unfavorable conditions and his immunity, natural and acquired.

The community in which the child lives may make certain provisions to promote health and prevent disease which will bring into balance those forces which make for normal growth and development, but the individual must learn to do many things for himself.

In dealing with the child we must consider his mental and spiritual development, as well as his physical health. The healthy child is usually a happy child. What are some of the conditions which make for a happy, wholesome life?

In the first place there is "old man heredity." Oliver Wendell Holmes once said that if we could choose our ancestors we could have a better and healthier race. That being impossible, we must encourage the present generation of young people to make better choices in their mates. The importance of a healthy, vigorous stock to produce healthy children cannot be overestimated.

We may not be able to do much, if anything, about our heredity, but we can provide more adequately for the on-coming generation. In this connection, too much cannot be said in urging proper prenatal care for the expectant mothers. An adequate, balanced diet, freedom from disease and defects, plenty of fresh air and sunlight, rest and recreation and a mind free from fears and worry not only help to promote a healthy pregnancy, but put the mother in a better position to nurse her baby and care for its daily needs.

Health habits really begin at birth. The regularity with which the baby is fed, his daily routine of bathing, sleeping and association with his parents lay the foundations for more exacting health habits later in childhood. Psychologists tell us that habits good and bad are largely formed in the pre-school years.

Next to a good nourishing diet and health habits we must place recreation in the form of play and lots of sleep for the growing child. Children should play and rest in the open air as much as possible. They should gradually be exposed to the sun, with protection of the eyes in the northern and eastern parts of the United States there is very little sunshine in the winter months. Children should be given cod liver oil daily in these parts to make up for the deficiency of ultra violet rays.

A healthy child is free from debilitating diseases and defects. The child should therefore be protected against those diseases for which we have immunizing measures such as smallpox, diphtheria, etc. He should be under the supervision of a physician who will give periodic examinations and correct any remediable defects which may appear.
