MEMBER AUDIT BUREAU OF CIRCULATION

Life Lines

THE old saying about never missing the water until the well runs dry applies in the case of an arterial highway which is suddenly closed to traffic, but in the matter of The Dalles-California highway north, we could get along very nicely without the water.

As was stated by Highway Engineer R. H. Baldock, highway transportation has become an essential adjunct to the operation of the regular business of this area. The closed highway at Algoma has created innumerable inconveniences, unscheduled expenditures, loss of business, etc., which, cumulatively, mount up to an astounding total.

Closure of this highway for 30 days will be a blow to the economic welfare of this community. That is why efforts have been made immediately, by those primarily interested in public welfare, to make temporary arrangements which will permit the flow of traffic through the area to be resumed. It is devoutly to be hoped that these arrangements can be completed immediately.

Communities all along the line—Chiloquin, Modoc Point, Fort Klamath, Chemult, Gilchrist, Bend, and many others,—are suffering because of this disruption in regular transportation facilities. Cascade resorts will feel the effect.

Highways, like the railroads, are life-lines. We cannot afford to have them blocked.

Democratic Troubles

A FACTIONALLY split democratic party in Oregon is definitely in evidence in results of the primary election.

The left-wing Commonwealth Federation, which took control of the party in 1938, showed its strength in the nomination of five Commonwealthers out of 10 delegates to the democratic national convention. It is possible that a great many voters did not know which candidates were Commonwealthers and which were not, but that does not alter the fact that the pinkish left-wingers have established themselves more firmly in the saddle of Oregon democracy.

More conservative democrats, who saw the Commonwealthers lead the party to disaster in May of 1938 are angered and disgusted, and therein lies the factional split in the party. Oregon people, as a whole, are not favorable toward political radicalism, and so long as the party control is held by the left-wingers, its successes in this state are in doubt.

Perhaps Oregon, politically, is working down to a sensible basis, with the line of party cleavage between the radicals, as represented by the Commonwealthers and their ilk, and the conservatives, as represented by republicans and right-wing democrats. Once the republicans were also factionally split, but the democrats got the wild boys in the band-wagon rush beginning in 1932.

Telling The Editor

FROM MR. VANDENBERG

KLAMATH FALLS, Ore., (To the Editor)—The fine support given me by Klamath county voters in the circuit judge primary election, nominating me to that high office, gives me a keen sense of appreciation and responsibility. I assure the loyal supporters who voted for me, and all the people of the Klamath county, that it will be my unerring determination to prove that confidence in me is not misplaced.

I do not wish to make any far-fetched or grandiose conclusions from the result of the primary election. I realize there were good men in this contest and I voice my appreciation and admiration for those who conducted clean, constructive campaigns for the office.

DAVID R. VANDENBERG.

FROM MR. SCHAUPP

KLAMATH FALLS, Ore., (To the Editor)—I would like to take this means of expressing my sincere appreciation to the people of Klamath county for their fine support during the recent election in my campaign as delegate to the republican national convention.

While I would have been pleased to have represented the republicans of the second congressional district at the Republican national convention I did not feel justified in making an intensive campaign, due to the nature of the office. However, the complimentary vote I received from my friends in Klamath county more than repaid me for what small efforts I made during the campaign, and it is certainly gratifying to know that I received approximately eighty per cent of the republican vote in Klamath county.

Sincerely yours,
A. W. SCHAUPP.

WEYERHAEUSER MEN START LONG TRIP TO EAST COAST

Arthur Solberg and Charles Rice, Weyerhaeuser Timber company employes, left Saturday, May 18, on an extended motor trip through the United States.

The young men plan to make stops at Denver, Colorado, Salt Lake City, Utah and Omaha, Neb. They have received a pass to visit the house of representatives and the senate at Washington, D. C. From Washington the two will go to New York where they will "take in" the World's fair.

On the return trip Solberg is to pick up a car in Michigan and go on to Minnesota to visit friends in Minneapolis and his home town, Baudette. From here the two will start on their return trip back to the west. The vacationers expect to be gone about a month and a half.

Dorris

L. E. Stout is the new edgerman at the Associated mill. He and Mrs. Stout have moved to Dorris from Longview, Wash.

Mrs. Lillie MacDonald is remodeling one of her cottages and when it is finished she and her mother will occupy it.

Reuben Smith and his family have moved to Ashland where it is hoped the milder climate will benefit Smith, who has not been well.

Mrs. Lucille Barnes of Chico is spending several weeks with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Thackara, while recuperating from a recent illness.

C. G. Meyers arrived home from Westport Saturday evening and will take a load of his household goods back with him Sunday evening.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, May 21—First blows of the blitzkrieg hit our secure American economy as hard as our defenses. Our standards of money, prices, trade and living were shaken as much as our faith in our anti-tank guns which become pea shooters in the face of the 80 ton land battleships which Hitler launched in France.

It became apparent immediately to Mr. Roosevelt's economists that we had, for one instance, accumulated nearly $19,000,000,000 of gold—approximately two-thirds of the $28,115,000,000 known world stocks—to meet a world which suddenly might have no use for it. A German victory would mean the fixing of new world standards which used gold only for bracelets, watches and filling teeth. In its place around the world would come trade by barter, synthetic money, political price-fixing. And even if Hitler lost, the destruction he had wrought among his adversaries precluded the possibility that they could return to their golden way of living.

The realization began to dawn on the government economists that when Mr. Roosevelt said in 1933 he would try some other means of raising prices in case his gold policy did not work, he was really saying that if jumping out of the third story window failed to achieve his purpose he would go back upstairs and try something else.

TRADE TREATIES

Surely also obsolescent in case of a German victory, and shaken by the blitzkrieg was the Hull trade agreement policy. Mr. Hull's economists have been forced to turn their minds towards developing new methods. Their thinking now is developing toward the prospect of a political instead of an economic trade policy, especially for Latin America. That is they see the need for barter which considers our political necessities for the security of this nation more than price and other matters. An export subsidy is what they have in mind.

PRICE REGULATION

The transition seems to call likewise for a reversal of domestic policies toward a preparedness economy that may lead in the direction of state capitalism. The vast stores of armaments needed for security has caused the new dealers to start thinking first about government regulation to control supplies of raw materials and prices. A revised reincarnation of NRA has been talked. Some of Mr. Roosevelt's men are even suggesting privately he intends to use some of the $200,000,000 blank check from congress to institute some such co-operative organization. Certainly the government cannot permit prices to get out of hand and must prevent hoarding or speculation in needed materials.

Sheepish distrust of the stock market for price levels lately has caused the local economists also to suspect minimum regulations might be advisable also.

STRENGTH SOUGHT

Those authorities with whom I have talked are not thinking of this regulation in terms of social reform. All that now is a comparatively minor matter. The new tendency is toward strength, not socialism.

What has happened here is that all established cliches of economic thought have suddenly been challenged by a great offensive force. Such things as "defense of the dollar," "parity prices," and the like have become obvious absurdities.

The need for new methods has caused no great excitement here. It is true two government economists suffered nervous breakdowns last week under them. But there has been no agitation or dismay in any degree as extensive as in the touchy and poorly led New York financial markets.

DISASTER CURBED

It is appreciated here that even if old ways are being destroyed, so are the old financial disasters which came with such revolutionary changes in the past. The government is obligated and has the power now to cover this period of transition. It cannot afford to let things go. For instance, extensive armaments expenditures can have whatever inflationary force is necessary to offset attacks on prices and loss of markets.

Not that any well-settled definite plan of action exists here. The blow came too suddenly. The government men are nowhere near agreed on details as to what should be done, but they are beginning to see what must be done.

The worst you could expect out of this would be inflation

SIDE GLANCES

"That exercise certainly has put you in tip-top shape, Mr. Smith—bet you could sail right through an insurance examination!"

which is the opposite direction to the one in which the stock market went. And it could not possibly be the same kind of inflation which corrupted pre-war Germany because the government now has the power of control over prices and materials to press the brakes as well as the accelerator.

It appears probable the economic readjustments can be worked out faster and more effectively than our deficiencies in military weapons.

The seers are already predicting the coming of war to the U. S. Complete, no doubt, with Sunday excursions into the battle zones, peanuts, hot dogs and colored pennants for each army.

Tulelake

Two minor accidents were reported by a local physician this week with both patients recovering at home. Frank G. McGuire, about 40, employed in construction of the Earl Ager building, fell 10 feet from a scaffolding that collapsed Friday afternoon, suffering sprains and contusions of the left ankle and elbow and injuries to the right arm.

Barney Mauch was treated for a head injury but details of the accident were not learned.

Mr. and Mrs. Vernon E. Bitter announce the birth of a son, May 12, at the Tulelake Maternity hospital. Mr. and Mrs. Bitter, new homesteaders, have named the new arrival Ronald Adam. This is the first baby boy to arrive among the 68 families who homesteaded land in the Tulelake basin two years ago. A daughter was born in 1939 to Mr. and Mrs. John Decker.

Imogene Rowan and Jack Coakley, chosen by vote of the Winema school to receive awards presented by Tulelake post No. 164, American Legion, were recognized at the school last Wednesday afternoon by Samuel Phillips, officer of the post. Awards were made on the basis of scholarship, friendship, citizenship, leadership, service, courage and character.

A special joint meeting of Tulelake Legion post and the auxiliary, starting with a pot luck supper, will be held Tuesday evening, May 28, with nomination of officers for the Legion to follow. Election will be held early in June.

Mr. and Mrs. John L. Coakley, who will leave following the closing of school for Fallon, Nev., to reside, were feted recently by a group of friends and neighbors who have known the family since their arrival here in 1927. The honor guests were presented with a gift of silver. Hostesses for the evening were Mrs. George Frey, Mrs. Clark Fensler, Mrs. Hans Nelson, Mrs. John Tackas Jr., Mrs. Richard Smith, Mrs. Tom Kadous, Mrs. C. G. Fairchild, Mrs. J. C. Stevenson, Mrs. Ival Wolfe and Mrs. Ray Rowan. Nearly 100 guests were bidden to the affair, held in the Winema school house.

Five-hundred invitations have been issued for the senior class ball to be held May 31. The ball, a semi-formal affair, will be held in the high school gymnasium with music furnished by Buddy Gray's orchestra.

Charles Coates has accepted a position with Peyton and Company as bookkeeper.

SECOND HAND DEALER RAPS CITY LICENSE

Charges that city licenses for second hand stores fail to give adequate protection against "bootleg" operations in the second hand business were made before the city council last night by W. H. McPherrin, operator of the Sixth Street Exchange.

McPherrin asked the city council for a refund on his license, complaining that he was being forced out of business by unlicensed second hand stores. He enumerated a long list of second hand stores which he contended are operating without licenses.

The matter was referred, after a short discussion, to the council as a whole, the police department and the city attorney. The police department has charge of the licensing of all second hand stores in the city.

Cantral Objects

Another problem arising out of city licenses was discussed during the short council session. A representative of the Klamath Amusement company, Arcade hotel, appeared before the city fathers asking that action be taken immediately on the amusement company's application for licenses to operate 10 pin-ball machines.

The Klamath Amusement company has paid the city $1500 for license for the year, plus $100 for operation of the 10 machines, but the licenses have not been approved.

Councilman R. A. Cantral brought the issue to a head by exclaiming that he objected having the council "rushed into the matter." The council decided to investigate further before taking action.

Letter Read

Mayor Clifton Richmond read a communication from Mayor Angelo J. Rossi of San Francisco in which local city officials were advised that San Francisco and other bay region cities are observing "Moral Rearmament Week for National Unity" June 1-7. The letter was accompanied by a printed plea to the citizens of America to unite morally in the face of events abroad.

The council passed a motion by Councilman J. E. Hosking that the city attorney draw up a resolution asking state highway officials to proceed as quickly as possible in constructing a detour around the flooded stretch of The Dalles-California highway at Algoma. It was pointed out that the flood works considerable hardship on, the city.

LOVE, COURTSHIP AND MARRIAGE

By ERNEST R. AND GLADYS H. GROVES
Noted Authorities on Marriage Relations

What is the purpose of the engagement? By publicly announcing their decision to become husband and wife, the couple remove themselves from the turmoil of courtship, with its uncertainties and secrecy. They can now go on more calmly, sure of themselves and of each other, to take the next step toward marriage. So long as they were not committed to each other, the possibility of a breakup hovered on the horizon. Some new person might come along who would carry off the loved one. In spite of solemn vows, privately said, one knew that many others had believed themselves betrothed, only to find that what is not made public may never see the light of day.

Both get a foretaste, now that the engagement has been announced, of the reactions of friends and relatives to their union. Opposition may be so strong that either one may want to break the engagement. Or the same amount of opposition may only drive the two closer together. They may have expected trouble, and be surprised to find none; and this very lack of opposition may take some of the zest out of their alliance, for one or both.

Being accepted lovers, they find it easier to arrange to be together, not bothered by other people. Privacy is often theirs, and they have a chance to get to know each other well. Many things they want to find out, as to their marriage expectations, their own and each other's marriageable qualities. In this they will fare better, and learn more, if they do not let their mounting dependence on physical nearness cloud their judgment. They need to know that each responds to the other, emotionally and physically. They also need to keep their heads clear, that they may still give each other a final sizing up before taking the next step into marriage.
