OREGON GUIDE BOOK PUT UP FOR SALE

Oregon's first complete guide book, "Oregon: End of the Trail," written by the WPA Oregon Writers' project, is now on sale. The book, written with both tourist and general reader in mind, gives a comprehensive picture of contemporary Oregon with a backward glance to the days of the fur trader and the covered wagon. Chapters on natural resources, industries, education, art, literature and tall tales comprise about one-third of the book's contents, while sections devoted to eleven of the larger cities and towns give complete tourist information. The Oregon guide book is one of the WPA American Guide series of travel books, of which a volume has been, or is to be, published for each state and territory of the Union. Like the other books of the series, the Oregon Guide contains a wealth of information on where to go and what to see, the history and lore of each locality as well as mile-by-mile descriptions of ten major and 25 secondary towns over the state. Included in the more than five hundred pages of this encyclopedia guide book is information concerning the state's recreation areas, laws controlling traffic, hunting and fishing; the historic, geographic and geological points of interest, and the flora and fauna of Oregon. One hundred and twenty-five photographic illustrations, a four-color pocket map of the state, double-page maps of various cities, and a tour key map all add to the usefulness of the volume. The book was published by Binford and Mort of Portland and if not yet offered for sale locally, is obtainable from the publishers.

The Oregon Guide is sponsored by the Oregon state board of control.

Theatrical Superstition

It is bad luck to go back to a dressing room for a forgotten article once one has left the theater, according to superstition of show people.

Figuring an I. Q.

A person's intelligence quotient (I. Q.) is figured by multiplying the mental age by 100 and dividing by the actual age. Thus, a normal person had an I. Q. of 100. Below 80 is considered subnormal, and a person of gifted mentality is denoted by a rating of more than 120.
