JAPAN DECIDES TO TAKE QUICK MOVE IN EAST

By DeWITT MacKENZIE
Associated Press Writer

Inauguration of a nationalistic government with militaristic backing in Tokyo means that Japan finally has stripped off gloves and intends to use a strong hand on the western powers in speeding up the establishment of hegemony over eastern Asia.

In other words Nippon is saying: "We intend to expand, to get ahead with the Chinese war, and to control this part of the world. Outsiders stop interference."

That much is apparent. Whether this new form of rule means a leaning towards Nazi Germany and fascist Italy remains to be seen. Undoubtedly Japan's future relations will depend largely on the outcome of the European war.

Speed Move
One is inclined to believe, however, that the adoption of a modified fascist government is less a tribute to Messrs. Hitler and Mussolini than an effort to get speed in carrying out the expansionist policy. This is the appointed hour, while Britain is preoccupied with war and would find it extremely difficult to take any direct action to protect her vast interests in the orient.

Even should England win the war and destroy the axis power, she likely would find it exceedingly difficult to compel a reversal to the old order of things.

on the orient, once Japan had made changes and consolidated the ground. Naturally Nippon looks on this as the time to employ her whole energy to achieve her aims.

Two Outlooks
To understand the political change one must know that there are two world-outlooks in Japan. One is modern and has been introduced to western ideas. This applies to the urban, industrial, newspaper-reading part of the country—the group which opposes militarism. The other section comprises those who either have looked at the west with dislike, and returned to feudal thoughts, or never have studied the outside world. In this group are the army and the majority of the vast rural population.

It is the army which at present dominates the political situation. The army has no leadership today except that of narrowly trained military men. They believe in direct action if mere pressure won't avail.

To have peace we must end those who destroy religion.—Dr. David Lefkowitz, Dallas rabbi.
