Decker also filed a report on the accident, stating the driver of the car was Leon Savage of Willow Ranch.

NLRB MEN COMING IN LAMM DISPUTE

L. H. Fenton, international representative of the IWA, said Monday that the local IWA union has received a wire from the national labor relations board that two representatives of the board will arrive here this week to work on the Lamm Lumber company labor dispute.

The local union has not been informed as to whether or not the board in Washington has ordered a hearing in the case. It is expected that the two NLRB men will complete the investigation here, however.

Fenton said that the sending of two men is unusual, one usually being detailed to handle a case such as the Lamm dispute.

THE SPIRIT OF 76

by JOHN CLINTON

You know, in writing these columns I feel a certain obligation to my readers— if any — to report on Union rather than just advertise it.

That explains why when the boss said: "Write something about our Stop-Wear Lubrication being different from ordinary lubrication," I said: "Different how? Aren't all lubrication jobs the same?"

Well, they took my Hispano-Ply-mouth and gave it a regular Stop-Wear job. When they brought it back, they said: "Now look, Clinton. We want you to observe 3 things:

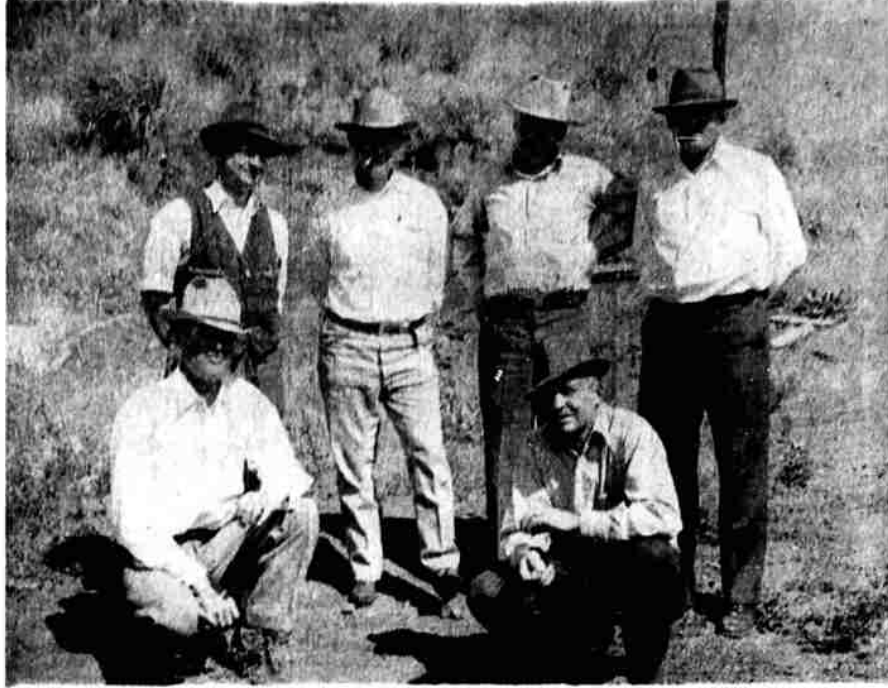

"You can see the difference, feel the difference, and hear the difference. Get in and drive around the block, then quit being a skeptic!"

Which I did. Would I could feel the difference in the way it steered and shifted! I did hear the difference in the way it sounded— quiet as a whisper, and as for seeing the difference, that was obvious— car dusted off, tires and running boards dressed, glass cleaned, even the interior gleaming out!

Don't just take my word for it. Drive down to your Union station and have 'em do a Stop-Wear job on your car. Then, drive it. If you don't agree it's got anything better you ever tried before, then may I never write another column in all my life.

English Port Citizens Have Greatest Show on Earth in Their Backyard

By EDWARD W. BEATTIE JR. United Press Correspondent

A SOUTHWEST PORT, England, July 29 (UP)—The war, which has turned scores of British seacoast resorts into front line fortresses, has made the shore populations critical audiences of what hereabouts is the greatest show on earth.

Ask anyone here what he thinks of today's raids or yesterday's or the other day's and he promptly gives them ratings in the list of gala performances staged between German planes and the Royal air force during the past six weeks.

Basis for Comparison He has plenty of basis for comparison, for the air war has been raging from St. Ives, on the extreme southern coast of England, to Aberdeen, Scotland, and it surpasses in uproar and general violence anything any other theatre of war in the world can offer at present.

This port is one of a handful which will witness probably two or three bomb attacks and a half dozen dog fights between dawn and dusk daily and is likely to hear planes at least six times in any one night. Off here is where German Stukas prefer to attack convoys.

Two days ago, I stood on a cliff overlooking the port while hot anti-aircraft fire drove off a swarm of bombers which tried in vain to attack the harbor. With me was a 70-year-old cottager, who disgustedly observed:

"They will never hit anything unless they are willing to face gunfire better than that!"

Stomps Off to Pub He remarked that last Friday's raid was better than the one we were watching and stomped off to a pub for his daily pint.

A couple of dozen people with sandwiches and thermos bottles were having a picnic on the cliff.

The streets and quayside of this seaport town are never deserted during air alarms. Friends gather on street corners to exchange comments peering up at the sky from house windows. Many of the watchers have field glasses and telescopes.

Any small boy here can tell a Messerschmitt from a Spitfire at a distance. Also his count of the number of planes engaged is apt to be much more accurate than your own.

"Uncle Herman"

After the raids, everyone in the hotel lobby discusses tactics. Even porters become tacticians and are willing to summarize in a flash just why this happened or that failed to come off. The comments on "Uncle Hermann" (Marshal Goering, head of the German air force) are usually unprintable.

Souvenirs from the raids are in great demand. I stood Thursday afternoon with a group of men and women looking from the window of a cottage at an aerial dog fight. Suddenly the man of the house struggling with a child in each arm, tore around the corner from the back of the cottage and placed his progeny into the safety of the family air raid shelter. He said to his wife, "There are spent bullets falling in the road!"

And the wife replied: "Well, the kids will be raking like 'ell when the raids are over."

John B. Ebinger, Klamath Falls attorney, was elected a director of the Oregon Izaak Walton league as the league closed its convention at Tillamook Saturday.

Among other business, the league proposed that the United States maritime boundary be extended at least 100 miles farther to facilitate control of west coast fisheries, and that the game fund be used exclusively for wild life conservation and propagation.

IWA LEADER ASSAILS AFL IN ADDRESS

Addressing an audience of more than 1000 woodworkers and their families and friends Sunday at the Klamath IWA's third annual picnic, Adolph Germer, director of the IWA's organizing drive for the national CIO, gave a keynote speech in which he called for immediate organization in the lumber industry.

Describing early efforts at organization of workers, Germer made a strong attack on local AFL officials. He said:

"The IWW laid the foundation for organization of the woodworkers in the northwest, but this organization did not simply spring up. The IWW, even as the CIO, came as the result of the indifference and inactivity of the AFL and their failure to meet their responsibilities to the working people as labor leaders.

"Those who charge us with 'communism' and 'communist domination' are only poll parrots mimicking the utterances of William Randolph Hearst. They themselves, these Joe Boyd's, Mike Pavolka's and C. D. Long's of this Klamath sector AFL, do not know the difference between communism and rheumatism."

Germer concluded his speech with a call for cooperation among woodworkers of this section in building a stronger organization.

Other speakers were Ray MacLain, chairman of the striking Lamm workers; L. H. Fenton, international executive board member of the IWA; John Brost, president of the Oregon State CIO, and William Dalrymple, CIO director for the state of Oregon.

Dalrymple scored the local AFL with accusations of making "cheap, red-baiting attacks" on the CIO, and declared that "the national leadership of the AFL has been engaged for some time in conspiracy with leading corporation lawyers and big interests to destroy the Wagner national labor relations act and rob the workers again of their hard earned legal right to organize and bargain collectively by majority rule."

Following the speeches the woodworkers enjoyed races, swimming, bingo and a tug-of-war. The millmen defeated the loggers 32-18 in a softball game. The picnic was sponsored by the Algoma sub-local, aided by the ladies' auxiliary. Net proceeds will go to members of the union at the struck Lamm Lumber company logging camp.
