A theatre party followed the luncheon hour.

Flower Class To Meet Monday

A meeting of the flower arrangement class of the garden group of the Klamath Falls Woman's Library club has been announced by Mrs. E. D. Lamb for Monday morning at ten o'clock at her home, 501 Cypress street.

The attractive bride wore a princess style gown of ivory satin, buttoned from the collar to the floor with the full skirt ending in a short train. A net veil of fingertip length, with a deep border of exquisite lace which fell from a circlet of lilies-of-the-valley in her hair, was an heirloom in the family, owned by the bride's great-great-aunt and brought from England a number of years ago. She carried a prayer book of matching ivory with ribbon streamers in which were looped gardenias and lilies-of-the-valley.

The bridesmaid, Miss Patricia Gallagher, sister of the bride, wore a floor-length frock of blue net with trimming of lace. Pink rosebuds, bouvardia and forget-me-nots formed her colonial bouquet. In her hair was a spray of bouvardia.

Mr. William Whitfield of San Francisco, a cousin of the groom, was best man.

Just before the bride and her attendant appeared on the stairway, Mrs. D. J. Zumwalt, at the piano, played "O Promise Me" followed by Mendelssohn's wedding march. Little Miss Darlene Price, in a taffeta frock of aquamarine with a coronet of bouvardia on her hair, greeted the guests at the door.

A reception followed the wedding with a white cake in the shape of two hearts laced together, surrounded by lilies-of-the-valley and white candles centering the table which was covered by a white organdy cloth. The bride's cake was served by Miss Gallagher, coffee was served by Mrs. Robert Gallagher and punch by Miss Dorothy O'Sullivan.

Those attending the wedding from out of town were Miss Mary Gallagher and Mr. Thomas J. Gallagher of Oakland, California, an aunt and uncle of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gallagher of Prineville, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. O'Sullivan and children, An- (Continued on Page 6, Col. 4)
