1908 Prognostication on War Borne Out on Field in 1940

SEATTLE, Aug. 7 (AP)—"Terrific explosions," wrote Arthur B. Reeve, "will rend huge, jagged holes in the earth; tons of metal will crash suddenly from the clear blue sky."

The year was 1908, and Reeve was writing an article for a magazine which carried on its cover photographs of William Howard Taft, William Jennings Bryan and Theodore Roosevelt. But Reeve was not thinking of those calm gentlemen. His article was entitled, "Newest Man-Killing Devices and the Warless Age."

Among the devices, he said, would be aerial torpedoes, anti-aircraft guns, mine-laying motor-cars, electric artillery.

"This," he declared in climax, "is war—war in 1938."

The peculiarly prophetic article, which appeared in the November, 1908, issue of Hampton's Broadway magazine, was brought to attention here today by J. N. Farrar, a salesman who discovered the issue in a collection of old periodicals. Some of Reeve's other predictions for the 1938 war: Dirigibles advancing under the protection of manufactured clouds; Seismographs used to locate "noiseless, smokeless, flashless" artillery;

Spectroscopes used to detect presence of aerial gases; Armored cars which would dig trenches by blasting while moving at high speed;

Tiny submarines which would be launched from battleships; Flights "from London to Paris, New York to Boston, by projectile."

Describing a battle scene—"in the war of 1938—where a constant rain of steel bullets whips about everything that moves," Reeve wrote: "Nothing can be seen in that valley of death except effects; the causes are hidden with all the ingenuity of which the human brain is capable. Everything is tense with a nerve-racking suspense such as ancient warfare never knew. Heroism has taken on a new meaning; it consists in being here at all."
