

ART CENTER MONEY WILL BE REFUNDED

Contributors to the fund for the Klamath Falls Art Center may call for their membership fees at the offices of the First Federal Savings and Loan association, Sixth and Main streets, according to the announcement made by C. S. Robertson, treasurer of the Klamath Falls Art Center association.

Membership fees will be refunded upon presentation of Art Center association receipts. All money contributed will be returned. The money which was raised by rummage sales, about $61, will be used to help pay the expenses of the association. If the project had been completed these expenses would have been included in the $1300 which was to be raised. The art center was finally denied to Klamath Falls because of the lack of qualified instructors who were on relief rolls.

While every effort will be made to contact persons having money due, there may be some money which will not be called for. To take care of such money the following provision was made by the officers of the Klamath Falls Art Center association:

Since the purpose of the art center fund was art education and because of the support given to the enterprise by the Parent-Teacher associations of the county schools, all unclaimed money left in the art center account after December 1, 1941, will be given to the picture fund of the Klamath County Parent-Teacher association.

Perfect Six-Point Landing

This is not a new kind of double-decked plane but the happy finale of one of the most spectacular feats in aviation history. Flying in formation in Royal Australian Air Force maneuvers at Wagga, N.S.W., these two planes became locked in mid-air. Three crew members parachuted to safety, but student pilot A. G. Fuller, in top plane, decided to try to land both planes. Cutting his motors, he used his plane's controls, while lower plane's motors roared to effect this perfect double landing.

SPRAGUE BARES PLANS FOR LABOR INVENTORY

secure classifications of workers that will justify plant expansion for national defense and also will tend to eliminate migration to other sections.

"While the peak of production will not be reached until 1942, difficulties already encountered stress the need of prompt listing of the labor supply.

"I am proud that Oregon is the first state to approach this problem in a manner which the national defense council has deemed practical. I know that labor and industry realize the vital importance of this inventory and will cooperate to the utmost in the mobilization of workers for defense purposes.

"The board has requested its secretary, L. C. Stoll, who is also director of the Oregon state employment service, to concentrate the efforts of this organization to make the survey a success."

Board Named

Other members of the board for the mobilization of labor, which has five men representing industry, and five representing labor, are: William Bowes, Portland city commissioner, ex-officio chairman; Otto Hartwig, Crown Zellerbach corporation, vice chairman; David Simpson, realtor; H. A. Dick, of Gilpin Construction company; Glen Kibbee, of Kern & Kibbee; Clark Van Fleet, Shell Oil company; Tom Sweeney of Veteran's state aid committee; A. A. Lausmann, Squaw Mountain Timber company; Ralph Peoples of CIO, and Bon R. Mathis of AF of L.

In active charge of the inventory is Leon S. Davis of Hillsboro, who was named by Governor Sprague with the approval of the mobilization board. Davis will work directly under Director Stoll.

Representatives of the board, under whose directions local committees are being set up in every section of the state, will explain details of the inventory to employers, employees and others at civic meetings, on the radio and through the press during the coming week preparatory to the actual mailing out of forms to the employers. Prompt return of these listings, which show detailed qualifications for each occupation, will be stressed.

In explanation of the main points of the program, which has been worked out by the board after several months of close study, Director Stoll said: "A successful inventory will enable us to certify to the national defense council the availability of enough labor to justify the location of defense industries in Oregon. This labor will be made available in the following order: "First, call all active unemployed persons who may be qualified for defense work.

"Second, all persons working out of their trade must be brought back into primary occupations — probably the biggest source of skilled labor in Oregon.

"Third, up-grading or training men on the job from lower classifications.

"Fourth, in an emergency, to ask industry to lend certain workers who could be spared without disrupting plant operations, providing such employees would be willing to enter the defense program.

"Other contributing factors also will be necessary, such as careful analysis of the minimum requirements of jobs and training of workers in related trades. Very definitely we cannot justify the location of industries here on the basis of workers now unemployed. The sound, practical solution of finding these people is by the inventory which the board has outlined."

TOO EARLY TO WEIGH RESULT OF GREEK WAR

By DEWITT MacKENZIE
Associated Press Writer

It is too soon to judge whether Mussolini's attack on Greece represents the beginning of an axis assault on the Dardanelles in an effort to crash through Turkey into the Near East, but if it does we are witnessing the start of a drama which may easily determine whether Fuehrer Hitler is to be master of a goodly part of the world or whether he is on the skids.

If the senior partner in the axis firm can break Britain's control of the Mediterranean he will pile upon her a disaster second in magnitude only to the smashing of England itself—so great that it likely would determine the outcome of the war.

Failure Is Finish
Failure to achieve this goal, however, after his inability to crush England by bloody bombing and invasion, will just about write his finish.

We must await developments before deciding what the Italian invasion of Greece means. It may be merely a tactical move, designed to consolidate the axis position in the Balkans by securing vital air and naval bases and, by the same token, depriving Britain of their use.

Possession of these bases would permit the Italo-German armies to carry out bombing operations against the British in the eastern Mediterranean through the winter even if a move against the Dardanelles were deferred until spring because of a approaching bad weather.

Surprise Attack
Greek Premier General Metaxas this morning declared that the Italian method of delivering the territorial demands constituted a "declaration of war." It's easy to see the general's reasoning in this, since he undoubtedly construes a three hour ultimatum, delivered at 3 o'clock in the morning when most of Greece was asleep, as amounting to a surprise attack.

The chief purpose of such a lightning stroke undoubtedly was to take the British by surprise if possible. England long has been pledged to give Greece all possible aid if the little country was attacked, and would be expected to get into immediate action if ondon was o. its toes.

UPON our forefathers, who came to America to escape despotic oppression, this historical truth rested particularly heavily. Above all things else, they were determined to prevent PERPETUATION OF POWER in this new country.

Washington, unanimously re-elected, refused a third term. Jefferson wrote voluminously in support of the principle that NO PRESIDENT should be allowed to serve more than two terms. Jackson, immensely popular, refused even to entertain the idea of a third term.

It was thus in America that the tradition against a third term grew up—rooted in the determination to keep this new nation free from one-man government which had throttled the liberties of Europe.

It is a good tradition to keep alive.

Mitzi Enters Cat Heaven

Police officers were sad Monday following the death of Mitzi, police cat, whose six years of life were ended abruptly Saturday evening by the wheels of an automobile in front of the city hall.

City Officials Mourn Death Of Mitzi in Auto Accident

Mitzi, the famous Klamath police cat, is dead.

Hearths of all fellow police officers are at half-mast and headquarters is a solemn place these days.

Mitzi entered the realm of cat heaven, where catnip grows on bushes and ponds of warm cream are found every ten paces, sometime Saturday night. She was found limp and lifeless in the street not far from the city hall by one of her officer friends about 6:30 p. m.

For six years Mitzi had had her own way around the department. Her history is not a long one. She was born near the desk sergeant's chair in the spring of 1934. Her mother had wandered into the office, gave birth to four kittens, left with three of them and deserted Mitzi. Just how many children survive Mitzi is not known, nor how many grandchildren are of her blood, but she is thought to have borne not less than 72 sons and daughters.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday in the plot in back of the city hall.

One of the last litter of kittens presented the police department by Mitzi, was returned to the officers Sunday by Sid Herbert, member of the force. The little kitten bears the unglamorous name of Oscar but is trying valiantly to live up to his late mother's winning charm and penchant for publicity.

KLAMATH BOARDS READY FOR DRAFT

total number of local draftees will be reduced somewhat. Local draft officials are encouraging the voluntary enlistment.

Volunteers who have filled out blanks, none of whom have yet been classified, are: Alexander Edward Shimkus, Robert Edwin Hinds, Alfred Austin Keaton, Francis Wayne Hess, James Perry Traywick, Eugene E. Caulk, Owen McKinley Hodge, Albert Joseph Werner, Edward Seaborn Anderson, Marcello Flowers Sandoval, Walter George Thomas, Charles Harold McKee, Glen Dean Jones, Donald Edward Godbey.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28 (AP)—From the cobalt blue capsules to the historic accessories of the 1917 drawing, everything was pronounced in readiness today for the great manpower lottery which will determine the order in which several millions of young Americans will be subject to call for military service during the next five years.

In the Interdepartmental auditorium — where the drawing will get under way shortly after noon tomorrow — workmen finished the preparations for the occasion. Doors were locked and guards posted.

The capsules—some 8500 of them, each containing a serial number—spent the weekend in a treasury vault, where they will remain until the zero hour tomorrow. The World war accessories—the big glass bowl, the wooden ladle for stirring up the capsules, and the blindfold to be used during the drawing—were in the custody of selective service officials.

Once the initial ceremonies are over tomorrow, officials estimate that the drawing will proceed at the rate of between 700 and 800 numbers an hour. From start to finish the lottery is expected to require a minimum of 12 hours.

QUARTERBACKS EYE PELICANS' SLUMP

The letdown of both the Pelican football team and the Medford Black Tornado, each of whom received defeats over the weekend, came in for the main discussion Monday noon at a regular meeting of the Quarterback club at the Willard hotel.

It was pointed out by Head Coach Snowy Gustafson and Line Coach Buck Hammer that both teams had apparently been keyed to such a high pitch for the traditional Medford-Klamath game they suffered psychological slumps. Medford lost to Bend and Klamath was drubbed by a strong Grants Pass eleven.

Snowy Gustafson stated the Pelicans would have lost anyway, but it was brought out by several persons present that the goal-line plunge of Don Schortgen, Klamath fullback, in the first period actually carried the ball across the goal and scored a legal touchdown before Schortgen was thrown back. The head-lineman actually called it a touchdown, but other officials failed to agree, the Quarterbacks said.

The loss of Weber, guard, and Mitchell, halfback, will be felt severely by the Pelicans, Coach Gustafson said, and his lack of reserve backfield material may hamper the Pelicans in future games. He said he may pull Don Rose from the guard position and make him a halfback.

Possibilities of changing the Medford game to a later date on the schedule for future years were discussed, as well as the possibility of leaving an open weekend, or a "breather" game, following the annual Medford contest.

Principal L. B. Emery of KUHS, who has been absent from both Quarterback meetings and his duties at school because of serious illness, addressed the group, commenting on the tension which always occurs prior to the Medford game, and on the strength of the Grants Pass team, which he said had been groomed as "the" team to win the Southern Oregon conference title this year.

A large attendance was urged by Quarterback Ken Klahn for the meeting next Monday noon, which will be the last luncheon during the football season.

RECLAMATION FOR DEFENSE MEET TOPIC

states because of migration from drought areas was cited by Commissioner Page in his paper, read by B. E. Hayden, superintendent of the Klamath reclamation project.

Page reviewed progress on the Deschutes project, and stated it will offer opportunity of a home and livelihood for perhaps 1000 families in the state.

Grave Problem
Migration from the drought areas of the midwest, Page said, is "perhaps the gravest domestic problem faced by the country today." He said that it is estimated at least 400,000 persons migrated to the Pacific northwest in the last decade, swelling relief rolls. Discussing the possibilities of land development to support the added population, he said Oregon has enough unused water to irrigate new land and supplement the additional irrigated areas to the extent of 1,400,000 acres.

Groesbeck Speaks
The reclamationists were welcomed to the city by R. C. Groesbeck, local attorney and a member of the state board of higher education, who urged development of Oregon State college as a technological school.

Groesbeck said that both taxpayers and students "win or lose on the curriculum" of the higher institutions, and suggested the elimination of duplicated subjects between the university and state college by promoting the college as a technological institution, and removing to the university courses not adapted to such an institution. He mentioned specifically courses in education and business training.

Measurement
Need for accurate, dependable measurement of the flow of irrigation water was emphasized by Ralph L. Parshall of the bureau of reclamation, located at Fort Collins, Colo. Accurate measurements, he said, make for equitable distribution of the common supplies, curtailment of waste, promotion of better control, and more attention by farmers to the efficient use of water.

Parshall designed the "Parshall measuring flume," which is widely known in reclamation work.

State Engineer Charles Stricklin led a round table discussion on operation and maintenance, with talks being given by Grace Magruder of Clatskanie and Superintendent C. C. Ketchum of the Vale project.

Interest Rises

Increased interest in irrigation in the Lower Columbia district was reported by Mrs. Magruder, a former member of the state legislature. Reclamation in that area, she said, has been accomplished by drainage, but despite the generous precipitation farmers are becoming convinced of the need of irrigating.

Methods of eliminating moss from irrigation canals and ditches were discussed by Ketchum, and by Manager Reed Carter of the Grants Pass irrigation district. Carter's paper was read by Victor Bayles, chairman of the Grants Pass board.

When Engineer Stricklin said he believed Grants Pass district has more population than any other in the state, objection was raised by A. M. Thomas, superintendent of the Enterprise irrigation district south of Klamath Falls.

It was brought out that Grants Pass has about 4000 population on 10,000 acres, whereas Enterprise has 4250 on 3000 acres.

The sessions of the congress are being held in the circuit court room. The delegates had lunch together at the Elk hotel, and were to hold their annual banquet at the Willard hotel Monday night at 8:30 o'clock. Speaker on this occasion will be Marshall N. Dana, editorial director of the Oregon Journal.

The congress will continue in session through Tuesday.

RAIN SCHEDULED FOR BASIN AREA THROUGH TUESDAY

Heavy overcast skies gave a feeling of valley weather to the Klamath basin Monday as rain continued to dampen the countryside throughout the day. The US weatherman continued to forecast rain for Tuesday.

Maximum temperature Sunday was 51 degrees, falling to a maximum on Monday of 44 degrees. Minimum Monday was 35, coldest thus far. A trace of precipitation was chalked up before 8 a. m. Monday bringing the total for the stream year to exactly one inch. Last year at this time precipitation totaled .59 of an inch with the normal figure 1.10 inches.
