Diminishing winds over the great lakes aided heroic marine rescue efforts today while bitter cold enveloped most of the mid-continent.

Coast guard crews battled Lake Michigan's frigid waters in an effort to keep down the death list written as boats sank or broke up under the pounding of the worst storm in years. Search for missing duck hunters was still under way.

A total of 92 known dead was reported. They included sailors, hunters, victims of snow and freezing weather and those killed in the gales that accompanied a violent storm which began in the west Sunday and swept eastward across the nation Monday and yesterday.

JAPANESE GET INDIES OIL IN REPORTED DEAL

difficult negotiations which produced the accord.

Clash Postponed

(The United States and British governments, according to statements in commons, also have kept close touch with the negotiations. Japan long has desired to increase her oil imports from the Dutch islands so as to lessen her dependence on United States and British sources of supply. The German occupation of Holland, leaving the Indies in a weakened position, provided an opening for new Japanese demands on Batavia.

(In view of the large American and British interests in the East Indies oil fields, this issue threatened to raise new frictions in the Orient, epecially between Britain and Japan. The Batavia agreement apparently has postponed any clash of interests).

Americans Contributing Rifles, Revolvers for Defense of British Homes

By DAN CAMPBELL
United Press Staff Correspondent

LONDON, Nov. 13 (U.P.) — Americans are privately contributing rifles, revolvers and ammunition "for the defense of British homes," the ministry of information disclosed Tuesday night.

The first shipment has arrived and is expected to be the forerunner of hundreds of thousands of weapons collected from American homes. The first guns were distributed to a British home guard unit on duty at an airplane factory through "the American committee for defense of British Homes." The shipment included mostly modern arms, but there was a crate of old frontier buffalo guns and a case of rifles made in 1873.

In the first crate unpacked was found a revolver to which a printed label was attached reading:

"Friend, for Heaven's sake forbear
"To let the Germans come too near:
"Blessed be the man whose aim is straight
"But woe to him who draws too late."

It was from Edward Gray, 1621 T St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

A policeman's Colt .38 with ivory sight had this message:

"This revolver has been one of my favorites, but I gladly give it to the British cause."

Another anonymous donor gave 100 rifles in first class condition, and 50,000 rounds of ammunition.

Prof. G. H. Macurdy of Vassar college, Poughkeepsie, contributed a revolver. Dr. A. P. Krueger, of the department of bacteriology at the University of California sent a German Mauser automatic pistol. Many weapons were sent by American women.

One condition of the collection campaign was that 20 rounds of ammunition must accompany each weapon. The ministry estimated 12,000,000 private individuals in the United States hold guns, which are being collected at the rate of more than 100 a day.

The first consignment was delivered during an air raid "alert" but the home guard stood by and after the alarm was over marched away with their new arms to take up positions.

It takes the average driver about three-quarters of a second to move his foot from the accelerator to the brake pedal. If the car is traveling 30 miles an hour, the car will go 33 feet before the brakes are applied.

ITALIANS NOT READY -- GAYDA

ROME, Nov. 13 (UP)—Virginio Gayda, authoritative fascist editor and often spokesman for Premier Benito Mussolini, today claimed Italian preparations for the Greek campaign were not started until after Italo-Greek fighting commenced.

Gayda's admission was made as the high command reported British warplanes, raiding Italy's important naval base of Taranto in the arch of the Italian boot, had scored a direct hit on a fascist naval unit.

Greeks Blamed

Making the first responsible comment on Italian preparations for the Greek push, Gayda said "Italy didn't enter the war with Greece after long, deliberate preparation but only entered it to put an end to Greek-British aggressiveness."

"Italian preparations actually began October 28 (the day the war started) and the Greeks were not surprised for they had been preparing with the help of the British for a fight against the Italians, which they daily provoked," Gayda said.

The high command reported the British planes attacking Taranto were driven off before they could cause extensive damage. Six British raiders were said to have been shot down.

OHRID, Jugoslav-Greek Frontier, Nov. 13 (UP)—Nearly all villages in the Miriditi region of northern Albania are revolting against Italian rule, according to reports reaching here today.

It was reported that in the adjoining Dukadjin region the population of the Albanian villages of Komana, Berisa, Ibalia, Darla, Spas, Kremali and Megula had fled eastward to the frontier and that after the last group of rebels had crossed the Beli-Drin river near Kukus, they dynamited and destroyed the bridge.

OIL CONQUEST

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13 (UP) High diplomatic sources said today they believed control of the rich oil fields of Iraq is Germany's chief objective in its current conversations with Russia.

They believe Germany will attempt to draw the soviet union into Adolf Hitler's continental economic system.

German control of Iraq oil—with Moscow's cooperation — would serve this three-fold purpose, they said:

1—Give the German war machine needed oil supplies.

2—Enable the reich to choke off the vital flow of Iraq oil to the British fleet in the Mediterranean.

3 — Eliminate Turkey, now friendly to Great Britain, as a threat to the axis powers.
