

Training Maids Can Be Done With Very Few Headaches

By MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX

December is hospitality month. The spirit of Christmas inspires many parties, some informal, others more elaborate. Edith Barber, leading American home economist, has just written a useful book for women who entertain and employ others to help them serve and keep house. It's called "Speaking of Servants."

For the hostess who has some one to help her, or for the woman who must do her own serving, the following section from Miss Barber's "Speaking of Servants" will be a practical guide during this season of many parties:

The Passing and Removal of Food

"If you are training a waitress, you will find it simpler to make it a rule that all food should be passed, placed, and removed from the left. All beverages are naturally placed, poured, and removed at the right."

"The waitress should be shown rather than told how to pass dishes containing food, which should be held low enough to make it easy for the person to whom it is being passed to help himself. The serving fork and spoon should have their handles toward the guest, with the fork to the left of the spoon.

"The method of removing the dinner plate with the right hand and the bread-and-butter plate or salad plate with the left hand should also be shown. The way to fill water glasses without removing them from the table and by holding a napkin in the left hand slightly under the mouth of the pitcher should also be demonstrated. The general rules for serving may be summed up as follows:

1. Serve hostess or guest of honor first. Continue around the table from the right of the person served first.

2. Place, pass, and remove all dishes from the left.

3. Place, pour, and remove beverages from the right.

4. Use left hand in serving from the left, and right hand in serving from the right.

5. Pass dishes in following order: bread, dishes, vegetables, sauces, main relishes, and salad if part of main course.

6. Remove dishes from main course in following order: roasts and accompanying dishes, dinner and bread-and-butter plates or salad plates together, relishes, and salts and peppers. A small tray or a folded napkin may be used in removing the latter.

7. A napkin, folded in a square, should be used in placing and removing all dishes.

8. The table may be crumbed with the use of a folded napkin and plate, if necessary, after the main or salad course."

MENU

BREAKFAST: Sliced bananas in orange juice, cracked wheat cereal, coffee cake, coffee, milk.

LUNCHEON: Tomato juice, macaroni and cheese, rolls, canned peaches, cookies, tea, milk.

DINNER: Beef and kidney pot pie, pastry crust, boiled potatoes, steamed broccoli, deep dish apple pie, hard sauce, coffee, milk.

Get the Christmas Rush Over Early--Then Relax Yourself

By ALICE HART

NEA Service Staff Writer

If you have firmly resolved that you, the hostess, are going to look at least as well as your house and trimmings do when this year's Christmas guests arrive, don't wait another minute to figure out and write down ways to get all shopping done before December 15.

Cards ought to be addressed by the same date. And there's no law against wrapping the presents you shopped for early, getting them addressed and ready for mailing soon after the fifteenth. Last-minute, hurried sessions with wrapping paper and ribbons can be just as nerve-racking as last-minute shopping tours.

Order Groceries Before Christmas Week

Remember to place your orders with the grocer, florist and meat market the week before Christmas. Put the finishing touches on the children's costumes for the school pageant several days before they are to be worn. In other words, go through the hustle and bustle details early instead of late. Wear yourself all out early in December and then have a week of reasonable peace and quiet

Immediately preceding Christmas.

Get Enough Pre-Christmas Sleep

Get the rest of the family to try to cooperate, to get their shopping done, their cards addressed and final arrangements made for parties to be given and parties to be attended. Don't be trapped into agreeing to let the bridge club meet at your house the day before your holiday house guests are expected. Don't agree to serve on more Christmas entertainment committees than you absolutely know you'll have time for.

Then plan to get enough sleep the week before Christmas, to have a new permanent wave if you need it, to spend some time getting your face and your clothes in good order. You'll find that the holidays will be ten times as much fun as they were last year when you were so tired and harassed that you looked simply awful and felt even worse.

MAY: Maybe I owe you an apology, youngster. That coffee was strong, but it tasted fine—not a trace of bitterness. It was grand!

JOHN: I knew I could prove that strong coffee isn't necessarily bitter. Now I'll make it weak—and you'll like it that way, too.

JOHN: Even when it's made weak, M.J.B. is still swell coffee. That's because you get all the flavor and no watery taste.

MAY: Live and learn, live and learn. Imagine a sprout like you showing me how to make the best coffee I ever tasted!
