PROGRESS SHOWN ON TULE LAKE TUNNEL

Workmen are progressing on the Tulelake sump tunnel at the rate of about 25 or 30 feet per day according to B. E. Hayden, superintendent of the US reclamation service.

The workers have gone approximately 100 feet into the 6600-foot tunnel and each day are speeding up as they get under way.

There is some 100 feet of open excavation on the lower (west) end which has been sublet to W. D. Miller Construction company. Miller now has a small machine working at that point.

It is possible, according to Hayden, that contractors will start crews at both ends of the tunnel with the coming of spring, and this move is expected to advance the job materially.

SOME PRODUCER

A giant Sequoia tree yielded 3000 posts, 650,000 shingles, and 100 cords of firewood. The upper one-third and the branches of the huge tree were not used.

The main difficulty in flying at high altitudes has been the vaporizing of high test gasoline within fuel lines. Recently devised by an air corps sergeant is a new aircraft fuel pumping system said to permit constant operation well above 20,000 feet.

WIND GROUNDS PILOT CLASSES

A high wind ranging from 35 to 40 miles per hour kept the Piper Cub trainer used by Klamath's CPTP students on the ground Saturday and no instruction was underway at the Klamath airport.

Flying was spotty during the past week, with about half the 10 students enrolled in the class remaining idle because of adverse weather.

Instructor Chet Stinson announced that if weather permits, instruction flights will be held Sunday.
