

Elks Make Final New Year's Plans

Patriotic Theme Decided Upon For Annual Dancing Party December Thirty-First

New Year's eve will find hundreds of guests when the annual dancing party will be given by members of the Elks lodge for their wives and sweethearts in the temple ballroom. This affair is always anticipated by members of the lodge as one of the highlights of the social calendar.

The reception hall will be transformed into a cocktail room with small tables placed about in cabaret style. The host will be Ernest Koschanski who is well known to all members of the club.

The decorations will stress the patriotic theme with red, white and blue used throughout the ballroom. For entertainment there will be a floor show and numbers by the Elks chorus.

On Monday evening members of the committee will meet in the lounge room to make final plans for the party. A number of cocktail parties will be given before the dance by members of the organization.
