

NEW OFFICIALS TAKE REINS OF KLAMATH FALLS

called on officials and committee chairman for short talks.

"Feet on the Ground"
Starting off the after-dinner program, retiring Mayor Richmond presented Houston with a giant key made of Oregon pine and prepared for the occasion by Captain Alfred Collier. Richmond himself received a handsome pen and pencil set from city employees, the presentation address being made by City Attorney Dayton Van Vector.

In preliminary remarks, and at the close of the dinner, Mayor Houston declared that the new administration has its "feet on the ground," that it is determined to carry on a sound financial program for the city, and that it has many plans for the building of a "greater Klamath Falls."

An example of the forthcoming program was offered in a talk by A. M. Collier, chairman of the recreation committee who said the committee had saved $7000 out of current income in the past four years and believed it would be possible in Houston's administration to construct the long-talked-about municipal swimming pool.

Airport Cited
Elmer Balsiger, chairman of the planning commission, said the commission's program calls for parking lots, better lighting, better parking facilities and better traffic management.

An unexpected feature of the evening was the introduction of visiting officials of the army engineers and the civil aeronautics authority, here to work out plans for the expenditure of $254,000 CAA funds on the Klamath airport.

Colonel C. R. Moore of the army engineers said that "by next fall you should have a very useful airport here." Others present were Kenneth (SI) Perry, former Klamath man now with the CAA at Seattle; W. F. Cummings, of the army engineers staff, and George Johnson of the CAA.

Dr. F. C. Adams, chairman of the airport commission, predicted "great things for the air" in the immediate future, and said it looks as if Klamath soon will realize some of its dreams for a more important place in air transportation.

Hamm Introduced
Mayor Houston introduced Police Chief Frank Hamm, stating he had appointed him because he had proved himself "honest and capable." In introducing Fire Chief Keith Ambrose, he asserted this city has one of the finest fire departments on the coast. At this juncture, firemen and policemen in full uniform entered the dining room and formed a long line along the wall.

E. B. Hall, speaking for the health board he has headed since his appointment several years ago by Mayor Willis Mahoney, paid tribute to the producers and distributors of milk and meat consumed in Klamath Falls, asserting that their cooperation had made the successful inspection program possible.

Other talks were made by City Treasurer Ruth Bathiany, Chairman Mitchell Tillotson of the bond committee, Police Judge Leigh Ackerman, Chairman Alfred Collier of the park board, Chairman George McIntyre of the library board, Chairman Howard Perrin of the binding code appeals board, City Engineer E. A. Thomas, and Councilman A. H. Bussman, John Keller, Harvey Martin, Rollin Cantrall, introduced were Building Inspector Harold Franey, Electrical Inspector J. W. Wauchope, Plumbing Inspector O. D. Matthews, Milk and Meat Inspector Calvin Hunt, Boxing Promoter Mack Lillard, all of the various members of the boards and commissions, Dorothy Post, Alexis Lyle Runyan, and Marguerite Kleiety of the city offices, and retiring Councilmen Charles Thomas and Elmer Hosking.

Retiring Mayor Clifton Richmond read excerpts from his annual report, given earlier to the outgoing council meeting at the city hall. Numerous speakers paid tribute to Richmond and other members of the administration for their cooperation and support, particularly in carrying out the recommendations of advisory boards.

FIRE DAMAGES BOX PLANT AT SPRAGUE RIVER

SPRAGUE RIVER—A fire of near disastrous consequences occurred Monday, December 30, at the Crater Lake Box and Lumber company's Sprague River plant. The fire, which was of unknown origin, started in the fuel bin and spread rapidly.

It occurred about 11 a. m., when a large crew was at work. The men, using all available equipment battled the blaze, which quickly spread to other parts of the mill. Had it not been for the early start gained by the fighters it is believed that the entire mill may have been wiped out.

In 1938 a fire completely destroyed the box factory and millions of feet of piled lumber at a huge loss. The rebuilding process has just been completed. The last fire resulted in the installation of modern fire fighting equipment, which proved its worth in last week's blaze.

son he left her out was that he disbed her son, whom he accused of beating Tim up in a drunken brawl.

Justice Bell's opinion, breaking the will and giving Tim's sister the entire estate, said there is a "strong presumption" that the attorney, O'Neill, exercised undue influence over Tim in drafting the will. The high court said it would have been better if O'Neill had taken Tim to another attorney.

As proof that Tim thought he was coming back after death, Justice Bell asked:

"Why did he (Tim) have them put $75 in gold in his hand, a bottle of whiskey in his pocket, and meals on his tray? Tim knew he was coming back."

Emily Weeks, the aged sister, brought the suit to break the will. Judge Ifay refused to break it, but the high court reversed him.
