MEASLES EPIDEMIC TERMED MILD HERE

A mild epidemic of measles, said to have started among students of Klamath Union high school, is sweeping through the younger generation of the town according to Dr. Peter H. Rozendal, Klamath county health officer.

The epidemic is in no way as severe as that of last spring when many children suffered serious complications. The rash appears for a period of from 24 to 36 hours, vanishes rapidly and the patient is, from all appearances, as good as new. Parents are urged to take precautions, however, and to avoid such complications as secondary ear infection, pneumonia, or severe colds. The quarantine period is not as long as the usual run of measles. Some mumps and chickenpox has also appeared in the city schools.

'ADAMS HOME FOR DOGS' COMPLETED

PORTLAND, Jan. 21 (AP)—Canine waits need haunt Portland's streets no longer—there is a luxurious home awaiting them at the "Adams Home for Dogs," built to fulfill the death-bed wish of "Grandma" Adams. The home was built after 10 years of litigation over the will of Mrs. Margaret Estelle Adams, apparently impoverished operator of a backyard boarding home for dogs, who left an estate of $20,000.

Mrs. M. L. Bingham, in charge of the home, said 10 dogs already were "enrolled," including a 14-year-old Pomeranian, assured of shelter in ultra-modern kennels of the establishment until its death.

Other dogs are being boarded for bare costs—some of them. The rest are strays. Alex G. Barry, Paul E. Froelich and Lou E. Williams, directors of the home, plan to take unclaimed dogs from the humane society and give them permanent homes.

"Grandma" Adams died in 1930. After her death friends learned that her cherished hope of establishing a home for dogs had become a definite plan. Her frugal way of life masked the fortune they found in bank deposits and gold coins hidden in dust-covered trunks at her home.

FARM LENDING SYSTEM EYED BY AGENCIES

Proposals that would assure farmers continued low interest rates on their mortgages with the Federal Land bank, and at the same time would help the land bank system cut operating costs, were discussed in Klamath Falls Tuesday by the directors of five National Farm Loan associations in Klamath and Lake counties. The meeting was held in the Willard hotel with A. W. Behrens, district manager of the association service department of the Federal Land Bank of Spokane, and Frank J. Reff, assistant secretary of the bank, both from Spokane, participating.

The associations represented are composed of approximately 325 farmers who have Federal Land Bank loans. These associations are stockholders in the Spokane bank.

Among the subjects discussed were the possibility of government guarantee of land bank bonds; a change in the structure of National Farm Loan associations from stock cooperatives to membership cooperatives, and a safe and workable mechanism for the adjustment of excessive mortgage indebtedness in appropriate cases, it was reported by H. E. Hamaker, secretary treasurer of the Klamath and Lake county associations.

"In the 23 years that the land bank system has been in operation," Secretary Hamaker said, "many changes have taken place in the system, in farming and in the organization of cooperative associations of all kinds. In light of their experience during these 23 years, members have made many suggestions for changes in the system. This conference is one of many being held throughout the northwest by the Spokane bank to obtain the reaction of its borrowers and stockholders to some of the changes most generally recommended.

"These conferences are part of the effort of the land bank to decentralize its operations—to transfer as much responsibility as possible into the hands of the members of the system and to consult those members whenever important changes are being considered."

Besides discussing the problems of the land bank system, the bank's loan servicing policy was reviewed. This policy, Hamaker said, is designed to continue deserving borrowers on their farms; to reduce farm tenancy, and to preserve the security—the farm with its soil and its improvements.

"Our aim," Hamaker explained, "is to make farm mortgage credit promote farm ownership, the well-being of the farm family, and at the same time protect the community and the nation from the loss of its human resources through tenancy, and the loss of its soil resources through erosion or other depletion."

Association directors were urged to become familiar with the work of county and community land use planning committees. These committees, it was explained, are the means by which local farm people are studying their own resources and problems, and are the channel through which voluntary adjustments may be made. Their work will have a direct effect on the lending, loan servicing and land selling program of the land bank and National Farm Loan associations, it was pointed out, and the associations should work closely with the committee so the best interests of the community will be served.

DISUNION

KLAMATH FALLS, Ore. (To the Editor)—A curious similarity between Adolf Hitler's observations as revealed by himself and by Bausching, and Elizabeth Alice Thies' letter of the fourteenth: Mutual belief that, owing to our diverse racial origins we are capable of unlimited disunity in time of unprecedented peril. (Hitler believes he can capitalize that diversity of origins to undermine us diplomatically, politically, economically and in the end, militarily.) Now Mrs. Thies believes we can defeat him after England's defeat, (which possibility she faces with sublime equanimity) after a long period of German-caused attrition, by not aiding England, but by waiting until our cities are in flames, our women and children bombed from Canadian, Latin American and Caribbean sea bases. Now as to this latter point, one of the two in error.

Inasmuch as Hitler, so far, has kept most of his invasion promises we must conclude that he tells the truth when he says that after he has disunited us he can invade us successfully. (He vanquished France by disuniting her. He failed to disunite England and has so far, failed to disunite her.) Is it possible that Mrs. Thies desires to aid him from within by frantically advocating disunity, utter license of anarchical propaganda (disunity propaganda). Her previous letters show that she favors laws curbing such honest aid to England movements as the committee founded by William Allen White. All of which is very confusing.

I do not under-estimate Mrs. Thies' adroit intelligence. She is as dangerous a sophist locally as was Oswald G. Villard in New York a quarter century ago. But we are all prone to err, as is Mrs. Thies, as is Adolf Hitler. When she infers in her letter of the fourteenth that each and every racial group in our union will selfishly pull and haul at cross purposes, each guided by its particular Old World heritage, Mrs. Thies gives her own un-American racial memory away. She has perhaps forgotten that in October she admitted being a naturalized American. The name "Thies" is German, also is it found in other central European countries, largely under German influence. And because she believes, cynically, that other recent-comers are loyal to the United States only after their loyalty to the old country, one must wonder if Mrs. Thies has a prior loyalty, ahead of the United States. I will throw back at her, her own platitude she flung so shrilly at Mrs. Brown in October at the end of a letter: Quote she: "There is no royal road to patriotism." Most assuredly there is no royal road and it hardly leads to patriotism.

Yours truly,
ORRIS MCARTNEY.
