NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10 —

Where the Italians slipped was on oil. Mussolini has just begun to fall if the semi-official analysis of his predicament here are true. Unless he gets gasoline—and apparently he can't—he will wind up flat on his back. The British met little or no air resistance in their sweep into Libya because Mussolini's planes were practically useless soon after the first blow. British air bombers concentrated upon the stores of gasoline accumulated along the coast in about 30 spots and wiped them out. Insufficient air fuel has also prevented the Italians from putting any formidable force against Greece.

Proof that these symptoms represent a disastrous shortage at home lies in recent announcements cutting further the rations for private Italian automobiles. A good grapevine indicates that even the activities of the Italian fleet have been curtailed for lack of fuel.

Peculiar circumstance is the Germans seem to have plenty, but so far have contributed little of it to desperate Mussolini except by establishing a Stuka nest in Sicily. Obviously Hitler is guarding his supposedly adequate stores for the air campaign against England.

OTHER REASONS

Not alone for this reason, the Italian cause is regarded as hopeless. Mussolini's men were able to break their own world's record for retreating by running thirty miles a day (brother, that's running) upon the good roads into Bengasi. But the good roads end there. Only treacherous desert trails lead back to Tripoli.

Italian collapse in Libya will open the way for the British to reinforce Greek attack and British home defense with ships and planes thus multiplying Italian troubles. The Albanian strategic point of Tepeleni has been falling for two weeks without hitting the ground, but when it finally folds Valona must go too and the Italians will be rather thoroughly whipped in that quarter also.

CHANGES

Air pressure on the heads of big business men in the defense drive is getting heavier.

Administration Senator Mc-Kellar has introduced a bill to abolish all dollar a year jobs and to restrict government workers to reasonable government compensation only. This would mean $8000 to $9000 a year which is hardly enough to pay the insurance premiums of some of these executives. There is talk of congressional investigation of contracts awarded to companies having officials on the defense commission staff. Sears Roebuck's vice president, Don Nelson, a former key business man in the defense regime, is on the verge of resignation. The new dealers are saying he is dissatisfied at loss of powers in the reorganization, but his associates know he wants to keep himself in line for promotion in the mail order house. Reorganization of the office of emergency management, a holding company of the defense program, is imminent and the new deal boys are actively campaigning for control of this agency. To top it all off the idea of creating an overall policy commission at the top continues to gain ground.

How much of this represents authentic White House intentions, and how much is merely an inside drive by the remnants of the new deal extremists is not yet apparent.

BUILDERS OF BRAIN POWER

By DONALD A. LAIRD, PH. D., SCI. D.

Author of "Increasing Personal Efficiency"

"WHY bother to appoint a committee—the chairman does all the work!" runs the comment in many an organization. We also hear that a group wastes time, that it decides nothing one smart person could not in half the time.

Dr. Goodwin Watson is a modern psychologist who has listened to many of these comments, and has spent much time determining scientifically whether or not two heads are better than one.

He has definitely proved—contrary to many notions—that group thinking is much better than the thinking of a person alone. This is encouraging for those who live in a democratic country where legislative groups and boards of directors—rather than one all-powerful individual—make the decisions.

If a group is working on a problem—whether it be drawing conclusions from facts or trying to figure out a last line for a limerick—Dr. Watson discovered that the answer to the problem is not only reached quicker, but is also of a better quality than if each member had worked on it alone.

One reason for this improvement in the speed and quality of group thinking against individual thinking is due to inter-stimulation. The individual actually seems to think better when he is with others who are also thinking on the same thing.

To sit passively in a group is one thing, but to think something out with the group is entirely different. In the latter case, inter-stimulation is at work.

A group of four or five people. Dr. Watson has found, is as good as one double the size.

Dr. Watson is a psychologist without a laboratory. His laboratory is located wherever he finds groups of people. He uses no instruments or strange surroundings that might make his people feel unnatural.

His own workroom at Columbia university in New York City is fitted with modern bright red and somber fawn-colored chromium furniture, venetian blinds, and a green rug—vastly unlike the proverbial psychologist's sanctum.

Dr. Watson has already studied some of the factors which contribute to human happiness and discovered that those who find joy in their leisure time cannot make up for the joy which they do not find in their jobs.

Many people spend years finding just the kind of work they want to do. Dr. Watson's own circuitous path into his present work may give them courage. It was years before he found psychology and the zest for life which it and his 117-acre farm have given him.

JOBLESS FUND OVER $11,000,000 MARK

SALEM, Feb. 10 (AP)—Oregon's unemployment compensation fund went over the $11,000,000 mark for the first time on January 31 as contributions for the last quarter of 1940 reached a peak.

The $11,063,473 in the compensation fund, which is expected to increase during February, compared with $9,235,552 a year ago, $6,248,546 two years ago, and $6,294,854 in 1938, when first benefits were made.

"Indicative of prospective demands on the fund is the drop of more than 25 per cent in the initial claims filed. While 64,031 claims were filed last year, indications are that less than 50,000 will be filed for 1941, the estimate being based on existing conditions." The unemployment compensation commission said.

DISMAL TIDINGS

IOWA CITY, Ia. (AP)—Prof. George Haskell popped this question to University of Iowa coeds in his class:

"How much would you require a prospective husband to be earning before marrying him?"

Eighty-five per cent demanded $2500 a year.

"Well," Haskell said, "less than 15 per cent of the income receivers in the nation earn more than $2500 a year. So about 85 per cent of you can expect to be old maids."
