Senator Holman's Vote

THE downstate press reports there has been some talk of an attempt to recall Senator Rufus Holman because he voted against the lend-lease bill. It is remarked in the Oregonian that legally, the people of Oregon do not have the power to recall a United States senator. Regardless of this obstacle, we do not believe a recall move of the kind would get anywhere nor is it justified. Senator Holman's speech in the senate explaining his stand on the lend-lease bill shows clearly that his motives were honest and sincere, and that is enough for the average citizen, regardless of his disagreement with the senator's opinion. "While the election to take either side of the issue was freely mine," said the senator in reference to his vote, "I chose what probably is the unpopular side because I believe it is the right side for the welfare of the American people." In his speech, Senator Holman objected to the lend-lease bill chiefly because of his belief that in it "is the surrender of constitutional powers by the congress to the president." He said further that the bill is designed "to make the president dictator of the resources, labor and destinies of the American people." Mr. Holman made an emphatic stand for national defense, urging that the United States "not now go afieid, inviting it (the homeland) to be attacked." He expressed his sympathy for Britain, but said "I cannot have a divided allegiance. I cannot at the same time serve the American interests and the interests of any foreign nation on the face of the earth, regardless of my personal sentiments." Many citizens will take issue with what Senator Holman says, and right may be on their side in this vital question. But what is important is evidence that the senator's decision was based on diligent and conscientious consideration, and he made his vote on that basis. No man can be expected to do more.

Crater Lake Winter Travel

HAVE you been to Crater lake this winter? Have you ever been there in the winter time? A trip to the amazing blue lake in its setting of snow at this season is well worth the while of anyone, whether he be skier or just plain sightseer. Travel to the lake has been somewhat less this winter than a year ago. At the first of the month, 1940-41 winter visitors numbered about 1800 fewer than on the corresponding date of the previous year. It is not good news that winter travel to the lake has decreased, when the beauty and snow sports attractions of an area opened to winter travelers only a few years ago should bring more people into the park each winter season. Park service people attribute the travel statistics principally to the unfavorable weather on weekends throughout the past season, and we are inclined to agree with that explanation. Even when there has been good weather through the week, unfavorable developments have occurred to discourage weekend trips into the mountains. Further support of this theory is to be seen in the fact that weekday travel has been greater this year, while weekend visitation has fallen off. What we are getting around to is a suggestion to people of the Midland Empire country that now is a good time to visit Crater lake. The weather has changed to the better, and a trip to the park will be found invigorating, inspiring and interesting. Furthermore, if there is a good volume of travel now, it may offset the losses of the bad weather weekends, and that will be helpful in convincing national park authorities of public appreciation of winter opening of Crater Lake park. In response to an inquiry, we give herewith the names of Oregon senators who voted Wednesday against the bill which would have given Klamath county a senator of its own. They are: Best and Ellis of Umatilla; Booth of Linn; Fisher of Washington; Francisovich of Clatsop; Kenin and Mahoney of Multnomah; Childs of Linn; McKenna of Multnomah; Stadelman of Wasco; Strayer of Baker; Wheeler of Linn and Zurcher of Union. Most of these senators represent districts of a much smaller population than the 17th district, which they refused to divide.

U. S. 'Intervention' Hoped by France To Relax Blockade

VICHY, March 13 (UP)—The Vichy government announced today United States "intervention" may bring about a compromise with Great Britain, averting the use of French warships to convoy foodstuffs through the British blockade. An official spokesman said the Vichy government is highly satisfied with American reaction to Vice-Premier Admiral Francois Darlan's warning Monday—that unless Britain lifts the food blockade within "a few weeks" he is prepared to use the guns of the French fleet for convoys. The possibility is seen the United States will intervene directly with London and obtain at least a temporary relaxation of the blockade whereby 600,000 tons of American wheat can be shipped to unoccupied France to "avert starvation." The French government was said ready to give concrete guarantees none of the American wheat or other foodstuffs will reach the Germans or Italians. Admiral Darlan, it was said, intends to take no action toward bringing the immobilized French fleet into use to protect food convoys until Washington's answer to his request for the 600,000 tons of wheat is received. The request, Darlan has announced, was transmitted to U. S. Ambassador Admiral William D. Leahy Sunday night. The spokesman said the Vichy government of Vichy is under no obligations of any kind to furnish foodstuffs by requisition to Germany, hence any supplies reaching unoccupied France will remain here and "cannot possibly affect Germany's ability to continue the war." At the same time, the spokesman said, Germany has no obligation either moral or under international law to feed the people of unoccupied France. Broadcasters To Talk Music Row NEW YORK, March 13 (UP) Neville Miller, president of the National Association of Broadcasters, announced today that the organization's board of directors will meet here Monday to "consider the whole question" of a new contract which again would make available for general radio use the music controlled by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers. ASCAP-controlled music has not been heard on network and most independent stations since January 1, when a previous contract with the composers' society expired. The broadcasters had rejected an ASCAP proposal for a renewed contract. Broadcast Music, Inc., was established as a rival to ASCAP and all but about 200 radio stations depended on BMI and uncopyrighted music.

FIRES BREAK OUT AFTER DRY SPELL

SEATTLE, March 12 (UP)—Unusually warm weather throughout the Pacific northwest today was accompanied by an outbreak of forest brush fires, most of them minor. The U. S. forest service issued a forest-fire warning, and weather officials predicted continued sunshine and above-normal temperatures. Humidity also was lower than usual, the forest service warning said. For the second successive day, Seattle temperatures reached the 70-degree mark. Reports of forest fires centered in western Washington and Oregon. Seventy-five fires were reported north of Seattle within 48 hours. The largest blaze covered 500 acres in the Linwood area. Several homes were threatened but firefighters ringed the blazes with water. Fern Fire A 700-acre fern fire near Saddle Mountain state park in northwestern Oregon approached a reproduction area but the seedlings were not believed in immediate danger. A district fire warden's crew near Forest Grove, Ore., fought a small fire caused by a cigarette on the roadside of the old Wilson river road. It was the only new outbreak reported in Oregon. Washington State Forester T. S. Goodyear said in Olympia 400 men were fighting brush and forest fires in southwest Washington, all caused by farmers trying to burn ferns off their land. A 100-acre fire sprang up on the Coweeman river and an 80-acre blaze on Toutle river, both in Cowlitz county. Clark and Swamania counties reported five fires of about 20 acres average. Goodyear warned that farmers would be arrested for setting fern fires without taking adequate precautions, although ordinarily the official permits for burning must not be secured before April 15. Dust Storm Hits Columbia Gorge THE DALLES, Ore., March 13 (UP)—A freak early spring dust storm developed yesterday in the Columbia river gorge as a result of unusually warm weather. The high temperatures in recent weeks dried out the top soil of wheat land summer fallow. A near-gale from the east "proust" clouds of dust down on the gorge. Since the first automobile show, the automobile industry has paid wages totaling more than $85,000,000,000.

Willow Street Blaze Summons Fire Department

A fire which started in a woodshed "clubroom" next to a woodshed at 618 Willow street called out city fire-fighting equipment at 5:53 p. m. Wednesday. The blaze started from an overheated stove in the clubroom, firemen said, and spread quickly to the woodshed and into the kitchen of the two-story house occupied by Lewis Larson. Firemen had the blaze under control in a few minutes. For the second successive night firemen were called to South Riverside street at 9:25 Wednesday in answer to a false alarm. The alarm was sounded from the same box. It was believed to have been turned in by pranksters.

Immortality In London Raid Shelters Mounts

LONDON, March 12 (UP)—Alarmed juvenile authorities and social workers warned today that with the renewal of the German aerial blitzkrieg immortality was increasing in London's air raid shelters "to a dangerous degree." "There are few boys and girls of 17 and 18 living under the present conditions for whose chastity I would be prepared to vouch," said Watson Boyce, probation officer of the Southwark juvenile court. He added he often had seen a boy and girl refuse to sleep in the same shelter with their parents and instead, make up a common bed. He also said two young girls appeared at one shelter wearing raincoats "and little else."
