Foot Care Topic At Sprague Meet

SPRAGUE RIVER — A group of community women met Thursday, April 3 in the school kitchen to study the home extension lesson on foot care. The meeting was sponsored by the local unit of the county home extension with Mrs. I. W. Hare, president.

The aim of the lesson was to show ways to correct foot troubles. It was revealed that improper walking, poorly fitted shoes and hose contributed to much grief. The correct method of walking, namely, in a straight line was shown to remove many weaknesses of the feet. It was further shown that a persons facial expression is often a result of foot pain.

Those who attended the meeting were: Mrs. Joe Young, Mrs. Helen Riley, Mrs. Hard, Mrs. Pankey, Mrs. Rollo Moore, and Mrs. S. J. Custer. The group enjoyed a pot luck dinner during the noon hour.

ROVER COMES HOME
CHICAGO (AP) — There is rejoicing in the home of Dr. and Mrs. Sidney Silber — Rover's home.

Rover, a collie, disappeared three and one-half years ago. No trace was found until the Silbers drove to the home of a daughter and there found a bedraggled Rover.

The Silbers had moved since the dog's disappearance and his owners theorized that, unable to locate their new residence, 11-year-old Rover went to the daughter's home which he had known in his younger days.

Lollypops Urged As Childhood Fever Remedy

PHILADELPHIA, April 7 (AP) — The lollypop was placed Saturday beside the castor oil bottle and mustard plaster on the home remedy shelf.

Dr. Edward F. Burt, in an address before the postgraduate institute of the Philadelphia county medical society, recommended lollypops to raise the sugar level of the blood in childhood fevers.

Saying small children often refuse to drink any liquid during a fever attack and that the body then becomes dehydrated, Dr. Burt advised:

"Mothers should be impressed with the need for the child to drink some fluid and nothing is better to remedy the loss of blood sugar than a lollypop."

The field of barley at the right—almost waist high—demonstrates how yields are being increased on many farms along the Great Northern Railway. The knee-high barley at the left was planted at the same time. The application of phosphate fertilizer resulted in ten days earlier maturity and 26 bushels more barley to the acre. The phosphate field yielded 56.6 bushels of 44-pound grain to the acre; the other field, 30.7 bushels of 40.5-pound grain. The picture was taken on a farm near Pipestone, Minnesota.

"The Well is Dry"

That wouldn't be good news to any farmer. But at the worst it probably would mean no more than digging a new one.

Far worse if the farm itself should wear out!

A half century has passed since the Great Northern was built through the unsettled Northwest and immigrants were unloading their tools of husbandry from box cars to begin the taming of plains and forests.

Through all these years thousands upon thousands of tons of crops have been removed from the farm lands along the railroad—crops that have built your cities and towns—crops that have provided the principal traffic of the railroad.

Hand in hand with the building of the Great Northern, efforts were begun to enrich and conserve the fertility of the land.

The experimental farms which James J. Hill established near St. Paul and in the Red River valley, the experiments he encouraged and supported wherever he laid his rails, and his employment of soil and livestock experts—these were the forerunners of the county agents and the state and federal experimental stations of today.

A half century ago, in talks at State Fairs and at meetings of farmers and livestock growers, Mr. Hill was pointing out the danger of taking fertility too much for granted.

Today the Great Northern and its corps of agricultural experts are co-operating with progressive farmers and state and federal agencies in programs to restore fertility where there are signs of approaching depletion and to enrich and conserve it elsewhere.

Different lands and different areas, of course, call for different methods—in many places, the application of phosphate; in others, crop rotation and increased use of natural fertilizers; in dryland areas, strip farming which by alternating fallow and crop strips holds fertile top soil on the farm; improved types of soil tillage to minimize drifting and retain moisture; the seeding of crested wheatgrass and other cover crops to tie down fertile top soils; and contour furrowing to decrease erosion.

And so "railroading" and farming in the territory opened up by the Great Northern have come down a half-century-old road together. They are still traveling together because both are "landed" interests. Their future is bound to the soil. And they are resolved to keep that future ahead of them and not behind them!
