to Britain in exchange for defense base sites.

The vessels will help replenish Britain's vital forces used for maintaining her trans-Atlantic supply lines, but whether additional armed craft will be transferred to England was not indicated. Britain has said that she is badly in need of ships to escort convoys.

The cutters are armed but Early said he thought they had little more than one-pound cannons mounted on them. He said he doubted that additional armament would be placed on the ships before the transfer.

The White House secretary said the cutters were "good boats" that had been in service for some time.

Coast guard officials declined to give any information about which ships were involved, from what services they will be withdrawn, or what effect the transfers might have on coast guard functions.

However, the general description of the vessels fitted the 10 250-foot cutters of the coast guard's "lake" class. They are the Cayuga, Itasca, Sebago, Saranac, Shoshone, Chelan, Chamberlain, Mendota, Pontchartrain, and Tahoe.

CHURCHILL TALKS ON LOSSES IN WAR of the Atlantic and would soon be operating against German submarines.

He appealed anew for use of Irish ports and airfields to guard Britain's northwestern approaches, and told France she would be strictly blockaded and that British guns would resist any attempt on the part of the Vichy government to transfer the French navy from Africa to metropolitan France where Hitler could use it.

He admitted that "heavy losses" to German planes, submarines and cruisers would cripple British merchant marine disastrously without the "gigantic United States building program" which would give Britain "several million tons" of shipping next year.

He also reported that the British airforce had grown to such an extent that some of the raids on Germany had "exceeded in severity" anything the Germans had done in any single raid on England.

Churchill said that before the battle of Greece General Sir John G. Dill, General Sir Archibald P. Wavell and Greek General Alexandros Papagos advised their governments that "a sound military plan giving a good prospect of success could be made."

He added "It remains to be seen how well these opposing risks and duties have been judged, but I am sure there is no less likely way of winning the war than to adhere pedantically to the maxim of safety first."

He forecast "hard and severe fighting" against the German armored column in North Africa and revealed that the capture of Cherch in Eritrea cost Britain 4000 casualties.

MUM into supplying the ordinary, everyday needs of her people.

The people must DO WITHOUT so that the army and the navy MAY HAVE WHAT THEY NEED.

THAT, put simply, is what he means when he says that taxes must be made so heavy as to secure a reduction in consumption.

A WORD now as to what he means by taxation heavy enough to avert spiraling prices and wages.

Great Britain is scared of inflation.

Inflation is brought about by soaring prices of the things people need in their everyday life. As these things become scarce, due to concentration of productive effort on war needs, people who have money in their pockets will bid up the price in order to get what they want.

Britain's secretary of the treasury is proposing to tax the British people so heavily they will have no money in their pockets with which to bid up prices. That is the long and the short of it.

shins and chest hurts. Andrew and Mrs. Owens remained in the hospital.

According to investigating police officers, young Fox was riding his bicycle north on North Eleventh street when he signaled to make a left hand turn into the Oregon Journal station. A car had just passed him, he told police, and he failed to see Mrs. Ortis' car approaching when he swerved to the right.

The machine pulled sharply to the right in order to avoid hitting the youth, and as Mrs. Ortis steered the car over the curb and onto the parking, her foot slipped from the brake and on the gas accelerator sending the machine into the pole.

The Ortis child was standing between the two women and the force of the impact sent him against the windshield. He is the most seriously injured of the three. Ralph Fox was not injured.
