Fire's Invasion Coming Soon

(From The Astorian Budget)
WHILE the United States mobilizes its troops and industry for a defense against armed enemies from abroad, the Oregon state forestry department and allied agencies are mobilizing for an expected summer assault from fire, the No. 1 public enemy in the state's extensive forest lands.
 Attention is called to approach of the forest fire danger season by a letter from State Forester Nels Rogers, asking cooperation of all forest users and forest visitors in keeping the fire menace as well under control as possible this year. Mr. Rogers calls attention to a new factor of importance—that lumber is an important defense product so that any threat to its production by fire danger is a threat to the national defense program.
 One thing tending to make more likelihood of fire peril this summer is the increased amount of logging. Loggers are not the greatest danger to our woods from the fire standpoint, but logging does create a definite fire hazard—so much so that all logging is automatically discontinued when humidity reaches a certain low point.
 Motorists on the highways, careless campers, hikers and picnickers in the woods are probably the greatest source of fire hazard. All too often they are careless with cigarettes and camp fires. Arsonists are another danger. Nature herself sometimes becomes a menace.
 The fire season will soon be here. Dry, warm days will become more and more frequent. Soon we will be having a long dry spell that will suck moisture out of the woods and brush and leave the countryside as fuel for the fire. It is up to all visiting the forests to make sure they do not set any fires.

'Don't Feed Bears,' Warns Crater Lake Park Writer

By BECKY L. FOILES
CRATER LAKE — The general public has seen bears in various zoos around the country. Practically every cage that pens them up there is a sign reading, "Do Not Feed the Bears." Yet when that same public comes into our national parks, where in some of them such as Crater Lake national park, bears run wild, they do not heed the warning.
 Around the middle of April the bears in this area started to come out of hibernation. Common sense tells us that they are very hungry and that it is dangerous to try to feed them. The brown and black bears that are found in this park are not the kind that will attack a person unless the person tries to feed them out of his hands, or teases them. When someone hands food to a bear he will grab it, and in doing so his huge,

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON
WASHINGTON, May 13—The increased fury of the latest German air raid on London may not mark the limit of nazi destructive ingenuity.

The British have plucked information from within Germany that Goering is switching to production of four-motored long range bombers. He is doing this so he can use more airports and supplies deep within Germany for his bombing attacks.
 Until recently the scope of his night fury has been restricted to the number of planes he could supply with gas and oil, mostly along the channel coast in conquered territory. That is why the Germans had to rest a few days after every all-out effort. Their two-motored ships had insufficient range to be based on central German fields, where fuel and supplies can be made available in larger quantities.
 Up to now the British have assumed they could make the Germans see the futility of this kind of murderous civilian warfare as soon as they were able to do just as much to Berlin as the nazis have done to London. Now this new bad news brings up a puzzling question of the possible limits of British air power as measured against those Goering may ultimately put to work on the continent.

company reps. agreed. They went back to their plant and OPM Manager Knutsen sent out some experts to help them locate subcontractors. The company then said it had decided not to subcontract, but to fill the whole order in its plant in another city.

Mr. Knutsen's men investigated and discovered the plant in the other city was just a warehouse, empty, unequipped. The company has now come along with a request for 137 machine tools to equip the warehouse, and three fourths of these are standard machine tools which can be used generally for all kinds of boring.
 As anti-aircraft guns rate higher than airplanes in priority necessities, this company could theoretically take away machine tools from the aviation industry, merely because it does not want to sub-contract.

It is this kind of thing which has caused Mr. Knutsen to wear callouses on his forefingers, holding his nose.
PROUD WORK
 There are other defense experiences which make every one involved feel proud.
 One is the case of the Baldwin Locomotive Works, which could not find a lathe in its shop large enough to machine steel rings for naval gun turrets. A long time would have been required getting new lathes. Baldwin engineers got busy and rigged up some complicated attachments to lathes used for machining locomotive wheels; fitted the turret rings on these and are now doing their job without new machine tools.

INGENUITY
 Better yet was the aggressiveness shown by another gun factory working on parts for a new type of naval anti-aircraft gun which is supposed to be a whiz-bang. This company promised delivery in 200 days, the quickest delivery suggested by any of the bidders.
 When a government tool engineer dropped in to see the manufacturer and give him the cylinder and breech housing for production, the boss replied: "I believe we have some discarded machinery in the basement which would enable us to produce this job within 90 or 100 days." With some announced misgivings, the government engineer agreed to bank on the manufacturer's judgment.

 Exactly 78 days later (not 90 to 100) the company had forged 551 breech housings and 818 recoil cylinders, with 600 more housing and cylinders then going through the line and 50 more in the finishing stage. Not a single rejection of any of these parts was made.
 "I don't believe any job will carry with it the satisfaction and thrill which the development of this job, virtually out of scrap, has given the men in our plant," wrote the manufacturer. "I am certain that you will agree with me that too much cannot be said for the ingenuity and patriotic efforts of the men who made this accomplishment possible."

AMERICAN WAY
 This is the American way of going to work, the kind of peculiar American enthusiasm and earnestness which has made this country superior throughout its history in business, in peace and in war. The manufacturer is one who should rate a medal when the time comes for telling names. His accomplishment is all the more notable in this so-called modern day when the doctrines of ease, self-interest and anti-work have found root among so many democratic people.
 This one trait will save this country if it is to be saved. If it develops that there are too many of the other kind of people, nothing in the world can save it. Nothing else matters as much.

Vag Prefers Rule Of Josef Stalin

Earl Clarence Bradshaw, picked up on a charge of vagrancy, told arresting officers Monday that "Stalin's government was a lot better" than that of the United States. Judge J. A. Mahoney, justice of the peace, sentenced Bradshaw to 15 days in jail. Officers will probably take the man's fingerprints and check his record, Judge Mahoney said.

Woman Dives 14 Stories to Death

NEW YORK, May 13 (UP)—Cora Mae Groover, 25, a beautiful brunette from Homestead, Fla., hurtled through the glass window at her Greenwich village apartment last night and fell 14 stories to her death after a quarrel with her sweetheart, a Wall street attorney.
 The guns and armor plate mounted on the British version of the Bell Aircraft weigh 1500 pounds and cut the speed about two miles per hour.

SIDE GLANCES

"Maybe you did work for two dollars a week when you were my age, boss, but that's probably because you weren't as efficient as I am."

Theoretically, it is possible 709,482 descendants in three for a pair of rats to have 350 years.
