to aid Iraq were landing at Syrian air fields en route to Iraq. While affirming that France's Chief of State Philippe Petain "has no aggressive intentions against England or her empire," General Dentz said he had orders to "defend the sky and land" of the Levant states, and that "the army of the Levant is ready to oppose force with force."

Reports from Baghdad, the capital of Iraq, said that the Iraq air force "most effectively" bombed British warships in the Persian gulf at Basra and that the British garrison at Habbaniyah, an airbase, 60 miles west of Baghdad, was cut off from reinforcements.

With France taking an increasingly active role in the war, Germany announced officially that it had agreed to return approximately 100,000 French prisoners of war as one of the first results of French-German negotiations.

At Istanbul, German sources asserted that German "volun-

who presented the high school band in full uniform.

James Fowler, Americanization chairman of the American Legion, planned the program and introduced Angus Newton, commander of the American Legion. Nine organizations were represented by speakers who stressed the fact their members were better Americans for their interest in American activities through service clubs. Speakers urged citizens to be on the lookout for subversive activities and to beware of those who "saluted the flag in the day time and set fire to our factories at night." One speaker urged that it be kept in mind "not that 'I Am An American,' but that we are all Americans."

Attending in a body were members of Eulalona chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution. Speakers representing the various organizations included Mrs. LeRoy Carter, Business and Professional Women's club; Venture club, Margaret West; Legion auxiliary, Mrs. Samuel P. Miller; Veterans of Foreign Wars, John W. Chase; Lions club, Dr. Charles F. Harris; Junior chamber of commerce, Joe Bally; Elks lodge, Dr. George Adler; Rotary, Keith K. Ambrose; American Legion, Angus Newton.

Vast throngs turned rallies into spirited patriotic demonstrations yesterday as the nation held its first "I Am an American Day."

The meetings, intended to arouse in naturalized Americans awareness of what it means to be citizens of this nation, were held throughout the country in response to a presidential proclamation. Movie Actor Edward Arnold, president of the I Am an American foundation, said there were observances in 3500 cities.

At New York's Central park rally alone the police estimate of attendance was 875,000 and Chief Inspector Louis F. Costuma said he believed it was the largest crowd which ever attended a patriotic gathering in the United States. At Chicago's Soldier field the attendance was estimated at 100,000 by Otto K. Jelinek, park police traffic head.

Thermometer Falls To 28 Degrees Here Monday Morning

Garden flowers drooped as the mercury fell to 28 degrees early Monday morning, four degrees below freezing. The cold spell followed two days of high wind. Maximum temperature Sunday was 50 degrees. The thermometer rose Monday afternoon to a comfortable 62.

Snow was reported on the Greensprings mountain in mid-afternoon Sunday, and Macdoel and Dorris saw a winter storm in progress early Saturday night. There was no precipitation reported in the basin.

Forecast for Tuesday is "fair and warmer," according to the US weatherman.

Prowlers Ransack Bonanza Store

Headquarters of the Seventh Day Adventist church here said they had a missionary party of nine on the Zamzam, including Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Johnson, of Walla Walla, Wash.

Since the Zamzam disappeared without a trace, New York shipping circles conjectured that she might have been the victim of a German surface raider, which took off her passengers and crew.

If she had been torpedoed by a submarine, these quarters said, survivors in all probability would have been located in lifeboats and picked up by now.

Workmen Blast Daylight Through Tule Lake Tunnel tunnel operations, said that all indications were that the alignment had worked out perfectly, bringing the two ends of the tunnel exactly together in the middle of the mountain.

There was considerable "kidding" on that point by the little group which waited, 3700 feet from the east portal, for the break-through Sunday afternoon. Smith was there with the junior engineer, Frances O'Connor, who had a charge of the alignment work. They merely grinned at the balsters who talked about the drillers on the other end going right on by.

Drill Audible Presently, the sound of the drill beyond the wall became distinctly audible. To this writer, it was reminiscent of the muffled tapping of a Morse telegraph key such as they used to have in newspaper offices before the teletypes came in.

For nearly two hours the group on the Tule lake side waited, as the drilling from the other side became louder and louder. R. L. Welborn, shift boss on the Tule lake end, occasionally would put his hand on the basalt wall to feel for the vibrations that would indicate where the bit would come through.

Finally, chunks of rock began to fall off the wall. We all got to our feet and waited the big moment. Dust shot through crevices in the rock as the west side drillers "blew out" the hole with compressed air. Then the drill began again, loud and close now.

Picked Spot Welborn got a sledge-hammer. He picked a spot on the wall and knocked off the outer layer of rock. Within a minute the bit came through that exact spot.

Welborn clamped a Stilson wrench around the nine foot rod just back of the bit, to be sure the west-siders wouldn't withdraw it before pictures could be taken.

Then he pulled. The rod was released from the other end and it was pulled out on the Tule lake side. Welborn then yelled through the hole to the other drillers, and together they made plans for the blast to follow.

Wind Hot Standing with his hand in front of the tiny hole through the wall, the writer felt the hot wind from the Lower Klamath lake side of the tunnel. It has been distinctly hotter on that side of the job, and workmen have fainted there in the heat and humidity.

Engineer Smith reported Monday that since the opening, the tunnel seems hotter than ever. The point where the break-through was made is 3700 feet from the Tulelake portal and 2900 feet from the Lower Klamath portal.

Next operation is to trim up the sides of the bore, which is 6 feet 4 inches in diameter. Then will come the pouring of the concrete lining, to continue for about a month. Pumps will then be installed to lift Tule lake sump water 60 feet to the east portal, from where it will roll through the slightly-inclined tunnel to Lower Klamath.

The purpose is to relieve Tule lake of a surplus water problem and assure permanent cultivation of 21,000 acres of fertile land. On the Lower Klamath side, the water will be used for irrigation and a biological survey bird sanctuary.

The tunnel break-through came far ahead of schedule. Drilling started on the Tule lake side on December 12, and on the Lower Klamath side on February 10.

The J. A. Terteling company, contractor on the big job, has 500 days in which to complete the tunnel.

until forced off by the flames. Then, he said, they were unable to reach a raft. Thirty-two passengers and the crew of four were rescued by two other excursion boats.

A few hours after the tragedy, Coroner John Dix summoned a jury and started an investigation. John Mintz, engineer on the Nightingale, told the jury that he was feeding gasoline into an ailing carburetor just before the blast sounded. He expressed the opinion that the fuel was ignited.

displayed generosity to the beaten Germans.

Beaten, France will receive no generosity now from the victorious Germans — regardless of promises Hitler is making to the Vichy government.

GETTING back to Syria, General Dentz is supposed to have an army of about 60,000. It is fairly well armed, and Germans will arm it still better.

It is a problem for the British. If they attack before the Germans have time to get Dentz reorganized and rearmed, they will engage the French. If they don't, the delay will be costly.

It's a fair guess they'd better take the bull by the horns. It looks today as if that is what they will do.
